Poetry.

On the Cross.

BY BERNARD OF CLAIRVAUX.

Translated by Mrs. Charles.

Hail, Thou Head! so bruised and wounded,
With the crown of thorn surrounded;
Smitten with the mocking reed,
Wounds which may not cease to bleed

Trickling faint and slow,
Hail! from whose most blessed brow
None can wipe the blood-drops now;
All the flower of life has fled,
Mortal paleness there instead;
Thou, before whose presence dread
Angels trembling bow.

All Thy vigor and Thy life
Fading in this bitter strife;
Death his stamp on Thee has set,
Hollow and emaciate,
Faint and drooping there.
Thou this agony and scorn
Hast for me, a sinner, borne,
Me, unworthy, all for me!
With those signs of love on Thee,
Glorious Face, appear!

Yet, in this Thine agony,
Faithful Shepherd, think of me;
From whose lips of love divine
Sweetest draughts of love are mine.

Purest honey flows,
All unworthy of Thy thought,
Guilty, yet reject me not;
Unto me Thy head incline,
Let that dying head of Thine
In mine arms repose.

Let me true communion know
With Thee in Thy sacred woe,
Counting all beside but dross,
Dying with Thee on Thy cross:
'Neath it will I die!
Thanks to Thee with every breath,
Jesus, for Thy bitter death;
Grant Thy guilty one this prayer,
When my dying hour is near,
Gracious God, be nigh!

When my dying hour must be,
Be not absent then from me;
In that dreadful hour, I pray,
Jesus, come without delay;

See and set me free;
When Thou biddest me depart,
Whom I cleave to with my heart,
Lover of my soul, be near;
With Thy saving cross appear,
Show Thyself to me.

Notes.

"He seemed a victim. Was He? No!
For Jesus acted in His death.
He gave His Spirit leave to go,
And willed His own departing breath.
Christ was not passive when He died.
The Conqueror was the Crucified!

Christ suffers, and in this His tears begin,— Suffers for us, and our joy springs in this:
Suffers to death, here is His manhood seen;
Suffers to rise, and here His Godhead is;
For man, that could not by Himself have
ris',
Out of the grave doth by the Godhead rise:
And God, that could not die, in manhood
dies,
That we in both might live by that sweet sacrifice.

—Giles Fletcher.

THERE are no marks of the crown of thorns upon His brow, yet He looks more than ever a King! The placid sunrise is beautiful, but there is not half so much quiet beauty about it as reigns over that inexhaustible sweet face. O, look into His eyes, what a depth of love, what a tenderness, yet what an overwhelming power of love! In His Easter joy, he thought of us and of our salvation, of each one of us

by name and look; He will know that joy
again when we come before Him, to rest forever in His presence.—F. W. Faber.

WHAT is spring after winter, but nature
speaking of the Resurrection of her Lord!
It is the season when day is lengthening
and mastering the night; light is overcoming darkness, and life springing out of apparent death; as in the returning presence of Him who is very life and very light, and maketh all things new. Thus as morning and spring return again and again, so, after the manner of Christ's Resurrection, and in the image and likeness of God, must men arise, and be renewed day by day, while day by day the outer man perishes.—Isaac Williams.

I gave my cheeks to them that plucked off
the hair: I hid not my face from shame and spitting. They shall smite the judge of Israel with a rod upon the cheek. Isa. l. 6: Micah
v. 1.

For the Messenger.

Foreign Missions.

SENDAI, Japan, Feb. 10, 1887.

Dear Doctor Johnston:—Twenty-three yea ago to-day mother died. Tender childhood returns. The door of the chamber swings on its hinges, and through the distance of peopled time no noise is heard. The little one enters, and, in the solemn stillness of the night and in the hush of approaching dissolution, steals up to the bedside. Why this weeping? What mean these tears? The child knows not.
The Father commissions His ministering angels. She recognizes them, and speaks of them to her little ones. She knows nothing but life, and speaks a vital blessing. Is this death? They say so, but memory says not so. The child does not say so. Memory says she lives. Faith declares that death and the grave have no victory over her. Love, even to day, sees her living.

What of her whose dying words rhyme?
Why say dying words? Because that expression marks a certain period of time?
Time? What has time or any idea of time to do with such words as she uttered?
They are broader than time. Then,
what of her whose blessing in words of more than spiritual crystal rhyme through the halls of poetical memory? Poetical memory! Yea, these words are present as a divine song, as really as any of the Psalms of David. They have beauty;
they are instinct with praise; they are filled with a breath of power beyond the skill of poets.

What of her this day? Let the Japanese answer, and a beautiful memorial service will be rendered. "Thank God for your Christian mother." Here in heathen dom, such words sound like a message from St. Paul. And in personal presence sits the native man of God, as he makes this exclamation. Deep his breath and long, intensely deep and long, as if through all his being ran innumerable channels
through which it must be drawn. It reaches to the fountains of tears. His whole soul flushes through these pearl drops. "Young man, I say, thank God for your Christian mother. Your earliest portion of God's Word came to you from her lips. So it never came to me. You grew into divine truth easily on account of her. I must struggle into it. I must fight, and fight hard for every inch of the ground of my faith. You received from infancy the seed of immortal truth. It sprang up, and continues bearing fruit
after its own kind. As for me, instead of a plastic germ of life, I received a stone, and my heart sometimes seems to have partaken of its material. Young man, when wilt Japan, my country, dear to me
as my own right hand, rejoice in Christian womanhood? When? How long seems this delay! And you, coming from a Christian home, know more about the spiritual worth of true womanhood than I ever can—you, why? Why don't you answer; when will our country be like yours; our women like yours; our homes

like yours?"

The silence of thirty minutes trembled
on the verge of eternity, for eternal witnesses were present—witnesses who have full knowledge of God; that knowing which is eternal living.

No answer was given to the most earnest pleading that ever voiced itself from the form of man aflame with the love of God and of souls. The power of making promises was not mine: whence cometh
the power? From God, and from the people of the Reformed Church in the United States. Have you an answer to give to this pleading? Can't we assure this godly man of our love for the cause for which his whole being trembled? Can't we in a short time give to the people of Sendai the full benefits of a well-equipped girls' school?

You may grow weary of our continued
pleading for these souls. Some of you do. Have you ever tried to imagine what it is to have a Japanese plead for the souls of Japan? Do you know the original force of the words quoted above? This cannot be conveyed to you. When I heard Tilton and Beecher and others in America, I persuaded myself, or rather was persuaded, by their power, that I heard real eloquence. Spirit pleading for spirit here in a land of heathendom is more than eloquence in American public places can measure. And the Japanese clergymen praying for their countrymen I cannot describe.

Now on this day, growing more sacred
every year, let another plea for womanhood in Sendai reach your ears. Use not my words. You have heard them before for the same cause. Receive the words quoted in this letter. Study them, make them the energy of your giving; or, if need be, of your coming to Japan.

In the silence of this hour I hear some one near.

"With a slow and noiseless footsteps
Comes that messenger divine,
Takes the vacant hair beside me—
Lays her gentle hand in mine.

"And she sits and gazes at me
With those deep and tender eyes,
Like the stars—so still and saint-like—
Looking downward from the skies."

"Young man, think God for your Christian mother." And all of you, my friends of the Reformed Church, what are motherhood and manhood to you in your Christian homes? Your philosophy of life cannot show me their fullest worth.
What has a Christian mother been to you?
Will you share your gratitude by making an early contribution to the Girls' School Building of Sendai?

Mother, as long as womanhood in Japan
is in need, thy son in gratitude will plead, thinking of thee. W. E. H.

Closer Union of the Reformed Bodies.

BY REV. J. H. GOOD, D.D.

"Is a closer union (between the Reformed bodies) desirable, and desired?
If so, shall it be organic or federal, or merely co-operative, as in missions, foreign and domestic? And finally, is such a union practicable? and how can it be secured?" W. J. M. T.

Answer.—The above questions are from Dr. Taylor, of Newark, N. J., Chairman of the committee of Reformed (Dutch) Church to meet a committee of our church
on the subject of the union of the two bodies. As the matter will be acted upon by the General Synod, of Akron in June,
and as it is of general interest, and deserves general consideration, it seems not inappropriate to discuss it briefly in these "Questions and Answers."

The matter belongs properly to the two committees, who no doubt will settle the details carefully and considerately. We think the Western part of our Church is practically unanimous in favor of a union

with the Dutch Church or with the Presbyterian, or with both. But it is doubtful whether a great many of the ministers and elders have definitely reasoned out the form of union that is desired, and the process
by which the end may be reached. The matter will probably be fully discussed at Synod, but should be carefully considered beforehand.

We will give here the result of our meditations on the subject. We do not think it advisable or possible to make a union of value, in either of the forms exclusively above mentioned. It would be best to combine all the available and desirable points of all. To form a full, organic union involves a great many changes,
would cause much friction; is hardly desirable in itself, as it would involve the swallowing up of the one body by the other. It would necessarily wipe out some historical peculiarities that should not disappear, at least not at once. It does not appear to us that even the Apostolic Church had such an organic unity as is now understood by that term. There were diversities in the Apostolic churches, within the unity of the Spirit. The Gentile Churches were directed by Paul (See 1 Cor.) while the Jewish Christian Churches were guided from Jerusalem. Both classes of congregations had their peculiarities. We would prefer, therefore, to aim at a union in diversity.

This, we think, is not only the true form of unity, but the process of attaining it is easy. The idea then would be, to call forth a higher unity, leaving all the bodies
which shall unite in it, their separate existence, their peculiarities (dear and valuable to them, and of value for the upbuilding of Zion.) We would do this by creating a Supreme Body (Court, Judicatory or Assembly), as the crown of the system of the Reformed bodies. This would call forth no legal troubles, involve no charter rights or disputes, invade no Synodical rights, or peculiarities, cause little or no friction in its practical
worship, and require no long negotiations to bring it into being. It would be both organic, federal and co-operative. It would be organic, because these bodies
would be joined together in the one supreme body as their head. It would be the body that represents all and works
with and for all.

All that would be necessary would be the adoption of a constitution like the following, by the respective churches.

Constitution of the General Council of the Reformed Church in America.

1. The General Council of the Reformed Churches in America covenants with all the bodies uniting with it, that will labor to preserve the peace, prosperity
and unity of all the churches which it represents.

2. The several bodies composing its covenant to labor and pray for the unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace, and to co-operate cordially in the work of the General Council.

3. The General Council shall meet biennially, at such time and place as it shall select. The daily sessions shall be devoted to the work of the Board as is hereinafter provided for, and to devotional services. The evening sessions shall be devoted to the discussion of religious and moral questions.

4. The General Council shall appoint
the following Board:

(a) A Board of Foreign Missions, which shall have authority to prosecute the work
of Foreign Missions, through its officers;
provided that the separate bodies may carry forward their labors separately, in whole or part, if they shall decide to do so.

(b) A Board of Home Missions, with similar powers.

(c) A Board of Inner Missions, with
similar powers.

(d) A Board of Sunday-schools with
similar powers.

(e) A Committee to arrange for and superintend the discussions of suitable subjects during the meeting of the Council.

5. When this Constitution has been adopted by the two General Synods of the Reformed Church, it shall be in force,

as an organic act, binding the bodies in
one. If other Reformed or Presbyterian bodies are willing to unite in this General Council their application must be granted
by a majority vote of the Council, and they must incorporate this constitution in their constitution and laws.

6. The members of the Council shall be elected by the Synods, (or particular Synods, or bodies corresponding thereto)
namely two ministers and two elders from each Synod, whose expenses shall be paid
by the bodies electing them.

The above will convey our leading ideas. Room should be made for the addition of other bodies, which may desire
a closer union than that of the Reformed Alliance. This is only a brief outline of the plan, given in the way of suggestion
and help.—Christian World.

For The Messenger.

Harbor Missions.

Report for Jan. and Feb., 1887.

To the Rev. J. A. Peters, President of the Board of Home Missions, General Synod:
I had the pleasure of a visit of one of our dear brethren. I took the brother to a place in Battery Park, New York, where we would see the expected emigrant ship coming in. I said to the brother, look about you and see the six islands. The brother looked and said he saw none, not
one. I said: I will point them out to you. The spot you stand on is on an island, Manhattan Island: we are in the city of New York, and the city of New York is built on Manhattan Island. Now brother look, on your left hand side that big city with the many steeples is Brooklyn, the city of churches, with its four hundred churches, situated on Long Island. Now see just before you that great round fort with the monster gun which tells us New Yorkers, with its big mouth,
the time the sun rises and sets; that round fort is on small Governor's Island, the residence of the late General Hancock.
Now brother look straight ahead, right across the broad bay of New York where you see the pleasant hills all covered with cypress groves with a few gothic steeples
and some villas of fine architecture belonging to New York millionaires peeping out. That is Staten Island, which thirty years ago was the great place for church picnics before Coney Island came in fashion.

And now brother look to your right hand side and you will observe the long stretch of coast of the American continent, the coast of New Jersey, in the face
of which you will remark another island,
and although the smallest of any you have so far noticed, it is not the least among the islands. For it is Liberty Island, and the statue of liberty is prominent among all the objects you see, and the light the statue sheds at night is like a Sirius among all the stars and lights of New York. And now next to Liberty Island is a nameless speck of an isle, island No. 6. Now brother you have seen them all—now cast your glance once more to the foot of Staten Island where the quarantine is, and you will see our emigrant steamer, the fine steamship Harmonia, of the Hamburg packet line moving up. She seems now to proceed at a snail's pace, but wait until she is up with us in the river and you will find out her real speed, how she sweeps past like a whirlwind, for some of these ocean greyhounds are proceeding
nowadays with the velocity of railway trains. Now brother, there she is, let us pull out our handkerchiefs and wave them
as a welcome to our emigrants, whom we are expecting. Look how the deck is crammed and crowded with passengers. See there is one handkerchief waving from on board the steamer, there is another, and another, a dozen now. Be welcome to us ye emigrants, dear brethren, countrymen and friends from the old world. Be welcome in this new world and may the Lord give you His blessing and prosperity on our shores and we will stretch out our hand of welcome and help to you and we will receive you in our churches—and now brother it is time for us to wend our way to Castle Garden, for the passengers will soon be landed there and we will be ready for their reception.

The distribution of our Church papers among the emigrants has been attended with great blessing, as you may judge from the following: Some emigrants ask me if they can get our church papers, for instance the Reformirte Kirchenzeitung, regularly sent them in future. Again I receive letters from places far inland to the effect: "Pastor, you have given us in Castle Garden a church paper with your address in; we want to inform you, we found the Reformed church here, now some more friends are coming from Europe, will you send them also to the place where we are?" Again Emigrants call on me at our Mission office saying: "Pastor, here is your card, you gave us the card inside a church paper on our arrival in Castle Garden. We are staying here in New York." And I give them the address of one of our pastors in New York recommending them that they should join his church. But of all, the greatest blessing of our church papers and tracts which I distribute is that they lead the emigrants to our Saviour and open the gate of the kingdom of God to them on their entering this new world of America.

When I think of the time when the General Synod three years ago decided to establish this, our Emigrant mission in this great metropolis, I cannot help comparing this action of theirs with the action of the apostles who first of all established missions in those great cities, Jerusalem, Antioch, Ephesus, Corinth, Rome, being led to judge by the Holy Ghost, that those cities would be the important centres to spread the Gospel among all nations. For great cities, where all nations flock to, are the places where these nations also spread from, and if they receive the gospel in that city they spread it from that city to all the provinces, states and counties round about.

We render our sincere thanks to our dear brethren in Cleveland who every now and then send us a parcel of Kirchenzeitung for distribution among the emigrants, and also to other dear brethren who send us now and then a gift to the relief of destitute emigrants. May the Lord bless them for what they are doing for His kingdom. If those brethren could but see the joyful surprise of their poor countrymen and compatriots with their little ones when they are welcomed in a place where they least expect it all among strangers in a strange country, and when a table is spread prepared for them, what a pleasure for these poor emigrants to find that there are warm hearts, dear compatriots and loving Christians in this new country of America.

Immigration is swelling rapidly; an unprecedented influx of the nations of Europe is expected this year. As a proof I will quote, that one single agent has sold eighty-six thousand dollars worth of prepaid tickets already. And we want the profit of this influx for our churches in order to swell them all over the country. The number of emigrants arriving in January, 1887, was 8,986. The number of emigrants arriving in February, 1887, was 12,142, against 7,776 emigrants in February, 1886, showing how much larger the proportion is this year. The number of emigrants during the 12 months, 1886, was 321,814, of which 73,099 were Germans. Dear Brethren, pray with us that the Lord may give His blessing to our Emigrant Mission.

C. H. EBERT, 6 State St., New York.

Missionary Notes.

By Rev. A. C. Whitmer, Superintendent of Missions.

Easter Alms for Missions.

Let your Easter alms be not only for missions, but also unusually large. For two reasons:

1. We must enlarge our work. Most pressing calls come from Sioux City, Iowa, from Leavenworth, Kansas, from Topeka, Kansas and from Lincoln, Nebraska, for a missionary and a church.

2. We have received but little money for six months past. Our monthly receipts should be from $1,500 to $1,800; but instead of this they have been less than half, as follows:

Sept. 15th to Oct. 15th	$ 563.00
Oct. 15th to Nov. 15th	1,612.88
Nov. 15th to Dec. 15th	767.00
Dec. 15th to Jan. 15th	759.77
Jan. 15th to Feb. 15th	1,044.32
Feb. 15th to March 15th	924.76

Is it strange, then, that this plea is made? You have no idea how sadly our missionaries have suffered for want of their regular quarterage. You can hardly feel, as we do, the claim for new work in the West.

Will not pastors and people lay this to heart? Answer this as God's call for larger giving, and make your Easter a joy to others as well as yourself.

One thing more: seeing our great present need will not the pastors and treasurers send their alms at once to the Treasurer of the Board?

In East Pennsylvania.

I spent Wednesday evening, March 2d, with the Missionary Society of St. John's church in Allentown, Pa., Rev. S. G. Wagner, pastor. A very interesting part of the service was the singing of the little children. Sometimes the Sunday school choir furnishes the music. At roll call the members came forward with their dues and over $36.00 were announced.

On the 4th I met Rev. N. Z. Snyder's people of South Bethlehem. The missionary service was made more interesting by the presence of Rev. Dr. Koplin of Hellertown and Rev. S. F. Laury late of Wyoming, Del. Pastor Snyder has a tribe of young helpers.

On Saturday evening I visited the mission at Cataqua, Pa. Having just paid the last of a burdensome debt they breathed more freely. The Sunday morning service is German; the evening is English. The Wednesday evening service is mixed. The Missionary Society, in addition to the usual exercises, has a question box—a hint for every other society.

Leaving Cataqua by a late train I returned to Allentown for Sunday services in Christ church (Rev. M. H. D. Fensterfer, pastor), and Zion's (Rev. E. A. Gernant, pastor).

The week following I spent two days at the Missionary Convention of Tohickon Classis held at Quakertown, (and heard some good essays and speeches on our work) and Sunday, 13th, in the charge of Rev. D. Rothrock, Kintnersville, talking to the Nockamixon people (who pay not only the classical appointment but also much more. Do you know why?)

Lansdale, Pa.

New town, 1,600 people, electric light, railroad centre (60 trains through and from it daily,) growing, manufacturing interests, near Philadelphia, congregation organized ten years ago with 14 members, became a mission two years ago with 63, now has 118, aid society reducing church debt of $1,000, Sunday-school roll of 300, one-third adults, church too small, German service the last Sunday of each month, pastor's wife the appreciated organist, twenty MESSENGERS in the families, —so I wrote of our mission at Lansdale, Pa., in the train on my way home after a late visit. I met a good audience on a Tuesday evening and after speaking of our wants and prospects in the West urged a rapid reduction of appropriation for the sake of this new work.

A large number of Reformed people belonging to neighboring churches live in and near the town, and their pastors could do much for missions by urging these people to unite with the mission, because then the congregation would soon be self-supporting. Please do so, brethren. Encourage and help our missionary, Rev. J. J. Rothrock.

He was wounded for our transgressions, He was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon Him; and with His stripes we are healed. Isa. liii. 5.

Cardinal Gibbons's Report.

Cardinal Gibbons's report to the Propaganda at Rome on the Knights of Labor question, as cabled to the New York Herald last week is a very important document. The Cardinal refers to the meeting of the Archbishops last October to consider the question whether the Knights should be put under the ban of the Church, and says two of the twelve voted to condemn the organization. He then states the reasons advanced by the two who voted for condemnation—the Archbishops of St. Louis and Santa Fe—and closes as follows:

"To sum up. It seems to me plain that the Holy See cannot entertain the proposal to condemn the association—

"First. Because such a condemnation does not appear to be justified either by the letter, or by the spirit of its constitution, or by its laws or by the declarations of its heads.

"Second. That such a condemnation does not appear necessary in view of the transient form of the organization and of the social condition of the United States.

"Third. That it would not be prudent, on account of the reality of the wrongs of the workingmen and the fact that the existence of such is admitted by the American public.

"Fourth. That it would be dangerous to the reputation of the Church in our democratic country.

"Fifth. That it would be powerless to compel the obedience of our Catholic workingmen, who would regard it as false and iniquitous.

"Sixth. That it would be destructive instead of beneficial in its effects, forcing the sons of the Church to rebel against their mother and to range themselves with condemned societies which they have hitherto avoided.

"Seventh. That it would be ruinous to the financial support of the Church at home and to the raising of Peter's pence.

"Eighth. That it would turn into doubt and hostility the marked devotion of our people toward the Holy See.

"Ninth. That it would be regarded as a cruel blow to the authority of the Bishops of the United States, who, it is well known, protest against such a condemnation."

Christ, our passover, is sacrificed for us. 1 Cor. v. 7.

A Good Friday Meditation.

REV. JOHN CAVARLY MIDDLETON.

Before the Cross, whose cruel wood
Uphears the dying Son of God,
To-day my only thought shall be:
He died thereon for love of me!

For love of me! Ah! dearest Lord,
My heart seems bursting at the word!
Thy passion in Gethsemane—
Those drops of blood—for love of me?

For love of me! Was it for this Thou didst endure the traitor's kiss—
The judgment-hall's indignity—
The robe of scorn—for love of me?

For love of me, di'st Thou essay,
So weak and faint, along the way
That led to awful Calvary,
To bear Thy Cross? For love of me?

For love of me, Thy risen side—
Thy pierced limbs, O Crucified!
Thy Crown of thorns—the misery
Of quenchless thirst—for love of me?

For love of me! Nought I can say,
Or do, such love can e'er repay:
With all my soul would I love Thee,
And so return Thy love for me.

My love for Thee—like all of earth,
Is weak, I know, and little worth;
Yet all I have I give to Thee,
Because, dear Lord, Thou lovest me.

My love for Thee will Thou refine
And make it daily more like Thine:
Until my heart's affections be Entirely wrapt, dear Lord, in Thee.

Christine's Word.

"Howbeit Jesus suffered him not, but saith unto him, Go home to thy friends, and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee, and hath had compassion on thee."

Christine Wilson stopped at that verse in her morning's reading, closed the Bible, and sat for a long time looking thoughtfully out of the window.

"I wonder," she said, at last, slowly to herself, "I wonder if ever I have told any friend of mine what 'great things' Christ has done for me. I don't believe I have, I do not remember doing it, and yet why ought not I to, as well as the healed demoniac? I have been healed." There came into her face a look of reverent thankfulness, and she remembered that for His sake her sins were forgiven, blotted out. Then she rose and put away her Bible, but all the while she was dressing to go down the street there was an absent, preoccupied look on her fair young face.

"Oh dear!" she said at last, half impatiently, as she knotted the dainty lace tie at her throat, "don't see why that verse haunts me so. I'm sure. Yes, I know I ought to tell my friends. And I will, too," she added suddenly and decidedly. "I will not be obliged to say again that I have been less grateful than the demoniac of old. But whom shall I tell? I know; I will speak to the first friend I meet."

The cloud lifted from her face, and with light heart she went out into the bright spring sunshine. The verse and the impression it had made upon her had almost slipped her mind, when there came a quick step just behind her.

"Christine," spoke a familiar voice, and there was Tom Wayland. The instant she heard him, and met his merry, quizzical glance she remembered her resolution to tell "the first friend she met."

"But I didn't know it would be Tom. If only it was Ella Bailey, or any of the girls. Why should it be Tom, of all persons?"

Then, just there, a bit of Spenser flashed through her mind—

"It chanced, eternal God that chance did guide."

Christine involuntarily shivered. What if it were of God's special ordaining that she had met Tom? And, after all, why could she not tell him, as well as any one? questioned conscience. Had she not known him from her childhood up? They had studied the same books, played the same games; why should she hesitate to speak of this one thing to him?

"Why, because no one thinks of speaking seriously to Tom," she pleaded; "and he was never known to speak seriously himself."

Christine knew full well how mercilessly this self-same Tom could ridicule a thing when he chose.

"I cannot," she said, decidedly, to herself. "And besides the street is no place to speak of such things."

"But you presented your friend Miss Denham to him on the street only yesterday, and why not present Jesus to-day?" urged conscience, to which reasoning Christine had no answer.

They had been walking along together, chatting of this and that all the while that Christine had been parleying with her conscience.

They had come now to the corner, Tom was going one way, Christine the other.

He lifted his hat gracefully, and waited for her to pass, but Christine suddenly came to a standstill.

"Tom," she said, hurriedly, "it occurred to me this morning, and I am so sorry and ashamed about it, that I never said one word to you about my best friend. Oh, Tom, you've no idea what a friend He is, nor how He helps and comforts me. I cannot tell you how much happier I am since I found my Saviour. Won't you let Him be your friend?"

Then she waited almost breathlessly. Would he turn it off with a laugh as she had so often heard him? She looked up, and found, instead of a laugh, an entirely new expression for Tom Wayland's face to wear; and something very like unto a tear glistening in his merry brown eye.

"Thank you, Christine," he said, gravely; "I have no one to speak to me of these things at home, and by the utter silence of my friends who profess to know about them, I had begun to think there was nothing in it. I am very glad to find there is."

Then he was gone, and Christine hardly knew whether she felt most thankful to think that she had spoken, or ashamed that she had been so long silent.

"Chris, inc," said her brother, coming into the sitting room, where she was at work, a few days after, "there has been a dreadful accident. The Western express was run into by a freight, and a good many lives were lost; and they say Tom Wayland was on board."

Yes, Christine remembered he had told her he should probably go away on the train on business; he had spoken of it because it would oblige him to be absent from their church social meeting.

The report proved only too true; he was not only on the train but was fatally injured. But there had been a few moments of consciousness after the accident, and tearing a leaf from his note-book, Tom had painfully written a few lines, which he sent to Christine by one of the passengers who had escaped unhurt.

"Dear Christine," it read, "I cannot tell you how I thank you for those words of yours. I think I found Him yesterday, and He has done 'great things' for me in this dreadful time.—Tom."

"And to think," said Christine to herself, with a sob, "how near I came to not speaking it. How strange I should read just that verse that morning, and meet Tom! I suppose God knew all," and again that one little fragment came into her mind—

"It chanced, eternal God that chance did guide."

Who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God: And being found in fashion as a man He humbled Himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the Cross. Phil. ii. 6-8.

A Lenten Thought.

The forty days in the wilderness. The first Lenten season, prefaced the noblest ministry of love and service which this world has ever seen; when the Master came out of His solitude all questionings had been answered, all obscurities cleared, all temptations overcome. Henceforth Christ walked as one who saw His whole life lying straight and clear before Him to the very end, suffered as one who held the everlasting gain beyond the passing hour of bitterness, though as one before whose vision the truth lay undimmed by personal feeling and unobscured by partial knowledge. However gradually the character and purpose of His earthly life had been breaking in upon His consciousness, it is certain that in the silence and solitude of the desert His sublime Sonship and His divine mission were fully disclosed to Him, and that He entered upon His career in conscious kinship with the Father, in full mastery of the invisible powers of the universe, and in perfect command of absolute truth.

And the disciple who does not carry from his hours of temptation and sorrow something of the light which his Lord found them has missed the blessed fruitage of these seasons when the very roots of character are nourished into stronger life. Temptation resisted and sorrow rightly borne make wonderful disclosures of truth; the inquiry of every one who passes through these experiences ought always to be "What is God teaching?" The trial which does not lift a cloud, or open a new outlook upon the world, has failed of its purpose. At the end of every Lenten season the sunshine of Easter waits; so at the end of every sorrow borne with patience and with a desire to know the will of God there stands some newly risen hope or purpose which has put on the garments of immortality.

Suffering and knowledge lie very near each other, and he who has not passed through the one will never gain much of the other. The man who has never learned in his individual experience the great facts of life may make acute observations and brilliant speculations upon the movement of things about him, but he will never gain that mastery of the secrets of human joy and sorrow which discloses deepest knowledge, and commands the most fruitful influence. It is only after the iron has entered the soul of Dante that he is able to touch those deep chords which thrill with the pathos of everlasting farewells or to draw out those transcendent strains which are harmonious with the ineffable light of heaven; it is only as Savonarola has passed through the fire of temptation to silence for courtly influence and priestly advancement, only as the wrongs and sins of the time have burned themselves into his soul that he is able to clothe Florence in sackcloth and startle

Rome itself with the dread of impending judgment.

The man who accepts a principle by habit, or only half consciously, comes out of a temptation which has been resisted with a clear grasp and a firm, intelligent hold of that which was before vague and conventional to him; and he who meets a great sorrow with a feeble hold upon the essential and eternal elements of life, and opens his heart to whatever teaching the new experience may have for him, comes forth with a new conception of his surroundings and his destiny. That which lay under the mists of partial knowledge is clearly revealed and perfectly understood. The fires of trial have burned up the rank overgrowth of many a worldly career, the storms of affliction have cleared the air of many a selfish life, and out of chaos of some awful crisis of personal experience a new heaven and a new earth have been born.

Through every cloud some new light breaks in upon the soul and after the storm has passed the pure heavens bend over a world that has grown clearer and larger while it was hidden under the darkness, which not less truly than the light is God's messenger of truth and life.—Christian Union.

Therefore doth My Father love Me, because I lay down My life. John x. 17.

The Silent Offering.

"She did it for my burial."—Matt. xxvi. 12.

A difficulty is suggested by these words. Mary knew nothing of Christ's approaching death, and therefore nothing of His burial. He had not even revealed it to the disciples, and there was nothing in His appearance to indicate the end. He was in the midst of a strong and healthy manhood. Why, then, did Christ say that Mary had anointed Him for His burial?

Suppose that a cultured foreigner should walk over the ruins and examine the sculpture and paintings of a European city. Near the close of the day his soul is filled with a strange, undefinable joy. He has a feeling of awe mixed with gratitude to the God of such beauty and grandeur. It is a feeling to which he cannot give a name, and which he cannot shake off. Oppressed by it, he enters one of the ancient churches. At that moment the organ awakes in the gallery, and fills the twilight with its music. Now it sinks into the faintest whisper or rises into a tempest of melody, and he is entranced. The organ, to him, is not made of wood or metal, nor is its music simply the escaping of the air. It is the voice in which his strange and oppressive joy finds expression. It lifts into distinctness and invests with meaning the emotions which burdened his soul. And these emotions go out in its music as a well-defined and precious sacrifice to the God of the beautiful and the grand.

Mary had felt the magnetism of Christ's life. It had drawn out her supreme affection. This affection was deepened when Christ raised her brother from the grave. She knew not how to do it, but she felt that she must reveal her devotion to the Saviour. And on this appropriate occasion, Mary presented a silent offering. She took the most precious thing she had in the house with which to express the unspeakable feelings of her heart, and then poured out the rich and costly perfume upon the Saviour's head and feet. And upon this silent worship was most effective in its pleading, for it had a voice for Christ; "I know not how to worship Thee; my thoughts fail me; my thoughts are confused and indistinct; my offering has no lofty purpose; it will not honor nor will it serve Thee; but I bring Thee all I have—my worldly treasure and the offering of my heart; accept it, oh, Christ." And Christ responded: "I not only accept thy offering, but I give it definiteness and a precious meaning. It comes from thy heart clouded and indistinct; I give it distinctness and beauty. It is a voiceless offering; I give it a voice and a method of expression peculiarly its own. It is an offering without definite purpose; I invest it with a sublime purpose, and attach to it the sublimest motive; thou art anointing me for my burial." As the organ became the voice through which the artist's undefined joy became definite and went out in service to God, so Christ endowed the offering of Mary with voice and beauty and most heroic purpose, and then accepted it.—Churchman.

Wherefore Jesus also, that He might sanctify the people with His own blood, suffered without the gate. Heb. xiii. 12.

Views of the Tabernacle—The Mercy Seat.

The cover or lid of the ark, made of pure gold, was called the mercy seat, and it is usually considered a part of the sacred vessel upon which it rested. But it was so pre-eminent in the service of the tabernacle, so essential, so pre-eminent indeed as the very centre of gathering for the worship of Jehovah, it is entitled to special and separate mention. It was the only place where He met His people in communion, and had it not been for the mercy seat, all other arrangements that were appointed for their benefit in the wilderness would have been useless. It was that which gave significance to every feature of the complicated system of religious observances, that to this day call forth the praise and wonder of God's children.

The word is the original, at once indicates its purpose. The verb from which it is derived is translated 70 times to make atonement, 7 times to reconcile or to make reconciliation, 9 times to purge, and once to appease, once to pacify, once to cleanse and twice to forgive. The word first occurs in connection with Noah's ark, when God told him to "pitch it within and without with pitch." Here the verb pitch means "to make an atonement," and the noun pitch means "ransom" as in Ex. 30: 12; Job. 33: 24; Ps. 49: 7, or "satisfaction" as in Num. 35: 31, 32. Hence the essential idea of the mercy seat is a place where atonement is made.

The Israelites were impressively reminded of this every year on the great day of atonement. The high priest, clad in white linen from head to foot entered into the most holy place behind the beautiful veil, and sprinkled the blood of the sin-offering upon the mercy seat eastward, and seven times before the mercy seat. The life of the substitute having been sacrificed, the penalty of death having been discharged upon a vicarious victim, the high priest came forth, and leaning both his hands upon the head of the live goat, confessed over him all the iniquities of the children of Israel, and all their transgressions in all their sins putting them upon the head of the goat, and sending him away by the hand of a fit man into the wilderness. Thus did God again and again proclaim at the mercy seat, and by the mercy seat the fundamental truth of the Bible, with out which we have no Bible and no salvation, "It is the blood that maketh an atonement for the soul." (Lev. xvii. 11).

The word for mercy seat occurs but twice in the New Testament, once in Heb. ix. 5, and once it is rendered propitiation in Rom. iii. 25. But the root idea of the word is found elsewhere, as in Heb. ii. 17 "to make reconciliation for the sins of the people," and in 1 John ii. 2; iv. 10 "He is the propitiation for our sins." "God sent His Son to be the propitiation for our sins." Hence in both the Old and New Testaments the mercy seat is indissolubly linked with the thought of atonement, so that God in strict justice, can meet the believing sinner in peace, and be at one with Him.

The crown that was round about the top of the ark was designed to keep the mercy seat in its place. It is derived from a verb which means "to bind, to fasten together," and it was not intended for an ornament merely, but to prevent the law, so to speak, from breaking forth upon the people by whom it was surrounded. The disastrous effects of removing the mercy seat were seen in the unsparing destruction that fell upon the men at Bethshemesh, when they dared to look within the ark containing the two tables of stone. The law of God is not set aside in the work of Christ's redemption, but it has been greatly magnified and made honorable, so that nothing whatever stands in the way of the believer's triumphant justification.

The staves that bore the ark with its immovable mercy seat were always in their place. "The staves shall be the rings of the ark; they shall not be taken from it." The mercy seat was therefore always accessible. It accompanied the Israelites in all their journeyings for forty years in the wilderness, and was at hand day and night. The word for staves is derived from the verb which signifies "to be separate," and it should never be forgotten that those who are bought and cleansed with the precious blood of Christ necessarily become a separated people. Such is the declared purpose of His death, as it is written, "Wherefore Jesus also that He might sanctify [that is 'separate from common condition and use'] the people with His own blood suffered with out the gate. Let us go forth therefore unto Him without the camp, bearing His reproach." (Heb. xiii. 12, 13).—From The Truth.

When we contemplate Jesus in His garden agony and ignominious death upon the cross we see the fruits of our transgressions. He bears our sin and shame and torment and death. Not for Himself, but for us did He suffer and die. He died for me. This we should realize when we meditate upon His great passion in holy week. But whilst we contemplate the scene of varied ignominy and suffering, and are saddened by the unspeakable grief and sorrow, we should realize also that by these stripes we are healed. His death is our life. When Satan accuses us and conscience smites us because of our sins, which brought such suffering upon our Lord, and when the righteous law pronounces upon us the doom of everlasting darkness and pain, we point in triumph to the Lamb of God that bears our sin and pays our penalty. There is the ransom for our sin; there is the atonement for our transgression; there is the Saviour from all the baneful consequences of sin. He died for me. It is finished. Through faith the Lamb of God with all His merit is mine. The blood of Jesus Christ, the Son of God, cleanseth from all sin. He died for me, and I am saved.—Lutheran Standard.

Look there at Calvary, and, if you can see it through your blinding tears, behold the sacrifice He offered once for all to put away sin. We have none of us a due conception of the grandeur of that vicarious offering, which at once and forever made an end of sin. Think of it carefully and in detail. Count it no light thing that He who was the Father's equal, that He who was pure and perfect in both natures, became a curse for us, and presented Himself as a victim to justice on our behalf. This is a wonder among wonders, as much exceeding miracle as miracle exceeds the most common place fact. It overtops the highest Alps of thought, that He who was offended should expiate the offense; He who was perfect should suffer punishment; He who was all goodness should be made sin, and He who was all love should be forsaken of the God of love. What merit and majesty are found in His glorious oblation! Great is the sin, but greater is the sacrifice. The atonement has covered the guilt, and left a margin of abounding righteousness.—Spurgeon.

The Sparrow.

BY LUCY E. TILLEY.

Dost know thy value, O brown sparrow?
Beating thy passage with a timorous wing
Along a pathless way, as thou dost flit
From northern Winter to southern Spring.

Dost know thy value, O brown sparrow?
Whose wee deserted nest is well-nigh lost Within my rounded palm—a nest which now
Winter's first quick breath down at my feet
has tost.

Where grew the loomless lilies in Judea
Was once, in far spent years, thy value told,
Thine and thy wee brown mates, when said
the King,
"Are not two sparrows for a farthing sold?"

That was thine earthly value, O brown sparrow!
The heavenly value we may never know;
For, too, He said thy flight was ever guarded
By eyes which followed where'er thou shouldst go.

Where'er on frail brown wing thou wanderest,
Whether in northern or in southern land,
One knows and guides thy flight, O sparrow!
Thou canst not fly from underneath His hand.

Good Friday.

Why do we call this day "Good Friday?"

Because the Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God, suffered and died on the Cross to "save His people from their sins."

Now you can all understand, my dear young friends, that the Friday on which our Lord was crucified was a good day for us, who are saved, although it cost our dear Saviour such dreadful sufferings in His body and still more awful sufferings in His mind.

Let me try to explain to you three things about the salvation which Christ died to obtain for us.

1. How does Christ save us? If you will turn to Isaiah liii. you will find this explanation. "He was wounded for our transgressions; He was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon Him, and with His stripes we are healed. All we, like sheep, have gone astray; we have turned every one to His own way and the Lord hath laid on Him the iniquity of us all."

This means that Jesus suffered instead of us. We deserve to be punished for our sins, but Christ took our place. God then treated Him as if He were a sinner, and therefore He who was perfectly holy died for us.

We have a type or picture of this truth in Lev. xvi. 21, 22. There we see Aaron sending off the scape goat with all the sins of the people laid upon its head into the wilderness to a place from which it could not return.

This scape goat could bear away their sins because another goat had already been offered as a sacrifice.

These two goats taken together show what Christ has done for us.

2. What is the salvation which He gives?

It is three fold. In this life it brings to us the forgiveness of our sins, and a new heart with which we love God and believe in Jesus, and in which the Holy Ghost dwells.

We also have comfort in trouble, strength in temptation, and joy because of the hope that is set before us.

At death the souls of the saved ones depart to be with Christ, which Paul says is far better than living in this world. "To die is gain."

At the resurrection the dead in Christ shall rise, their bodies being made like Christ's glorified body.

Then the living Christians shall be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, and caught up to meet the Lord in the air, to be with their departed friends forever with the Lord.

3. How shall we secure this glorious salvation?

"Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." "The gift of God is eternal life and this life is in His Son." God offers His Son as a free gift to you. Take Him at once. Then you will know that you are saved because you believe on Him. For Paul says so, speaking as he was moved by the Holy Ghost; and Christ Himself says (John vi. 47) "He that believeth on Me hath everlasting life."—Episcopal Recorder.

As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up; that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have eternal life—John iii. 15.

The Red Hand.

"I, even I, am He that blotteth out thy transgressions."—Isa. xliii. 25.

There was once a deaf mute, named John. Though he never heard any other voice, he heard the voice of Jesus, knew it, loved it and followed it. One day he told the lady who had taught him, partly on his fingers and partly by signs, that he had had a wonderful dream. God had shown him a great black book; and all John's sins were written in it, so many, so black! and God had shown him hell, all open and fiery, waiting for him because of all these sins. But Jesus Christ had come and put His red hand, red with the blood of His Cross, all over the page, and the red hand, the dear red hand, had blotted all John's sins out; and when God held up the book to the light He could not see one left.

Now His sweet word to you to day is, "I, even I, am He that blotteth out your transgressions." Will you believe it? "Only believe," and "according to your faith it shall be unto you." It is no fancy or mere feeling, but God's truth, that Jesus Christ's blood has been shed—nothing can alter that; and that His precious blood blotteth out our transgressions; as St. Paul says (Col. ii. 14): "Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us." And oh! how much there is to blot out!—sins that you have forgotten, and sins that you did not think were sins at all, besides those you know of—to day, yesterday, all the past days of your life. And all these written in His Book!

Do you want to have them blotted out forever? Do you pray, "Blot out mine iniquities?" do you want to know that they are blotted out? Then take His word about it, and just believe that it is true, and true for you—"I have blotted out as a thick cloud thy transgressions, and as a cloud thy sins: return unto Me for I have redeemed thee."

"I am trusting Thee for cleansing
Through the crimson flood;
Trusting Thee to make me holy

A Fresh Argument for Temperance.

The arguments against the use of intoxicating drinks are many and most weighty: the waste of property, the injury to health, the desolation of homes, the neglect and cruelty to wives and children, the misery and crime to which it leads, and the shortening of life, which, it so often ends in the horrors of delirium tremens.

But these fearful results, so frequently and forcibly stated, too often fail of making the impression they should make, both from their generality and from our familiarity with them. A fresh and striking argument, and one which from its morality and individuality, it would seem all must feel, is given by Dr. N. B. Richardson, a distinguished physician of London, who says he "was able to convey a considerable amount of conviction to an intelligent scholar, by a simple experiment," of which in substance he thus speaks:

The scholar, an intelligent young man, was singing the praises of what he called the "Rudder Bumper," saying he could not get through the day without it, and that it gave him strength and health, as well as exhilaration, when Dr. Richardson said to him "Be good enough to feel my pulse as I am standing here!"

The young man did so, counting its beats carefully, and saying "It beats seventy-four."

The Doctor then sat down in a chair, and asked him to count it again. He did so and said "It has gone down to seventy."

The Doctor then laid down on the lounge, and said, "Now count it again."

This the young man did, and in surprise said "Why, it is only sixty four; what an extraordinary thing!"

The Doctor then said "When you lie down at night, that is the way nature takes to give your heart rest. You know nothing about it, but your heart, that forever beating organ, is taking a rest, and if you will but reckon it up, you will find that it is a great deal of rest, for in lying down, the heart is doing ten strokes less a minute than before. Multiply that by sixty, and it is six hundred, and multiply that by eight hours, and within a fraction, it is five thousand strokes different; and as the heart throws some six ounces of blood at every stroke, it makes a difference of some thirty thousand ounces of lifting in a single night, or over six hundred and eighty-four thousand pounds every year! When I lie down at night without any alcohol, then my heart gets its rest, and my strength is renewed. But when you take your wine or grog, you do not get that rest, for the effect of the alcohol is to increase the number of strokes, and instead of getting the rest which sleep is intended to give, you force the heart to some fifteen thousand extra strokes in a single night, and the result is, that you rise up in the morning comparatively weak, and unfit for the next day's work till you have taken another drink of the 'ruddy bumper,' which you seem to think is a source of strength and the life of man below."

The young man acknowledged that this must be so. He began to reckon up the figures, and found what it was to be lifting up so many ounces so many thousand times, and the result was that he became a total abstinence man, with the greatest benefit to his health, and as he admits, to his enjoyment of life and happiness.

If those who resort to stimulants, as they say, to give them strength and health, would but consider facts and statements like those thus given above, would not multitudes who now make use of intoxicating drinks, give up their use forever?

I am the Good Shepherd; the Good Shepherd giveth His life for the sheep.—John x. 11.

The Blue Jay.

When he has more of any special dainty than he can eat at the moment, as meat, or bread and milk, he hides it at the back of his tray. And when outside, nothing can be droller than the air of concern with which he goes around the floor, picking up any small thing he finds left purposely for him, a burnt match, a small key, stray pins, or a marble, and seeks the very best and most secluded spot in the room in which to hide it. A pin he takes long-whisk in his mouth, which he closes as though he had swallowed it, as at first I feared he had. He has no doubt about the best place for that; he long ago decided that between the leaves of a book is safest. So he proceeds at once to find a convenient volume, and thrusts the pin far out of sight. A match gives him the most trouble. He tries the cracks under the grooves in the moulding of the doors, the base board, between the matting and the wall, or under a rocker; in each place he puts it carefully, and pounds it in, then he hops off, attempting to look unconcerned, as if he had not been doing anything.

But if he sees that he is observed, or the match is too plainly in sight, he removes it, and begins again, running and hopping around on the floor with the most solemn, business-like air, as though he had the affairs of nations on his shoulders, the match thrust nearly its whole length into his mouth. The place usually decided upon is an opening between the breadths of matting. It is amusing when he chances to get hold of a box of matches, accidentally left open, for he feels the necessity and importance of disposing of each one, and is busy and industrious in proportion to the task before him. It is not so pleasing, however, when in his hammering he sets one off, as often he does; for they are "parlor matches," and light with a small explosion, which frightens him half out of his wits, and me as well, lest he set the house afire. The business of safely and securely secreting one match, will frequently occupy him half an hour.

He finds the oddest hiding-places, as in a castor between the wheel and its frame; up inside the seat of a stuffed chair, to reach which he flies on to the webbing, and goes in among the springs; in the side of my slipper while on my foot; in the loop of a bow; in the plaits of a ruffie; under a pillow. Often when I get up, a shower of the jay's treasures falls from various hiding-places about my dress—nails, matches, shoe buttons, and others; and I am never sure that I shall not find soft, milk-soaked bread in my slipper. But the latest discovery and most annoying of his receptacles, is in my hair. He delights in standing on the high back of my rocking chair, or on my shoulder, and he soon discovered several desirable hiding-places conveniently near, such as my ear, and under the loosely dressed hair. I did not object to his using these, but when he attempted to tuck away some choice thing between my lips, I rebelled. I never expect to find a key-hole that he can reach free from bread crumbs, and the openings of my waste basket are usually decorated with objects half driven in.—The Atlantic.

They pierced my hands and my feet: they look and stare upon me. They part my garments among them, and cast lots for my vesture. Psalm xxii. 16-18.

Xenophon.

Xenophon was an Athenian who lived about four hundred and fifty years before Christ. He was a celebrated general, historian and philosopher. He was a learner at the school of Socrates, and counted as one of his most gifted disciples. The life and the teachings of the great philosopher have been given to us by the writings of Xenophon, and his sober and practical style gives a good idea of the original. Quintilian, a Roman orator and critic, says of Xenophon, "The Graces dictated his language, and the Goddess of Persuasion dwelt upon his lips." His style is pure and sweet, and he seems to have been a man of elegant tastes and amiable disposition, as well as extensive knowledge of the world.

Perhaps his greatest exploit as a general was the leading of the Greek troops across the mountain ranges and the plains of Asia Minor. This was after the battle of Cunaxa, where the younger Cyrus was defeated and slain. Xenophon had joined this expedition against the brother of Cyrus, Artaxerxes Mnemon, with ten thousand Greek troops. After the defeat many of the Greek leaders were treacherously murdered in the Persian camp. The Greeks were almost in despair. They were two thousand miles from home, surrounded by enemies, and the only way of retreat lay across mountain ranges, deep and rapid rivers, and broad deserts. It seemed as if fatigue and starvation and the hostility of those whom they must encounter would effectually prevent their return to their native land, but Xenophon roused them from their despondency, rallied the forces, and they began the march. It was a time of great suffering, for they had literally to fight their way. But when they reached a Grecian city after untold peril, it was found that of the ten thousand led forth, eight thousand and six hundred still remained. During the latter part of his life he lived at Corinth, having been expelled from Athens. Though the decree of banishment was revoked, he never returned. His literary work was mostly performed during these later years. Of all his writings, his Anabasis has been pronounced the most remarkable. It is a work giving an account of the nations in the interior of Asia Minor, and of the Persian Empire and its government. He died at Corinth, in his ninetieth year.—The Pansy.

Pleasanties.

A little girl, after drinking a glass of water from a magnetic spring, said: "I do not feel one particle magnified, and I think these springs are a humbug."

"Pa, do you know what ma and I are going to give you for Christmas?" "Oh, the usual thing, I suppose." "The usual thing, pa? What is that?" "The bills to pay."

When the clergyman remarked there would be a nave in the new church the Society was building, an old lady whispered that she knew the party to whom he referred.

A three-year-old discovered the neighbor's hens in her yard scratching. In a most indignant tone she reported to her mother that Mrs. Smith's hens were "wiping their feet on our grass."

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 30, 1887.

It is gratifying to know that President Cleveland has approved the act to indemnify the subjects of the Chinese empire, who sustained losses by the violence of the mob at Rock Springs, Wyoming territory, in September, 1885. The promptness of the Viceroy of the Canton provinces in repaying the losses of American subjects at Quai Pang and in guaranteeing the property of missionary societies, demanded this return. Independent of mere comity however, the act of our government was one of simple justice to those who had been wronged.

Speculation is rife as to who will succeed Mr. Beecher in Plymouth congregation. Some quaint suggestions and guesses are made, such for instance, as that Dr. McGlynn, the recalcitrant Roman Catholic priest, will be called to the place. This talk comes mainly from outsiders. The council of the church say they have determined upon a series of supplies for the present by eminent men whose engagements will preclude their candidacy. Evidently the congregation has been built so largely upon the brilliant talents and personal magnetism of one man that it will be hard to sustain itself now that he has been taken away. That is the difficulty in all such cases. It is hardly possible that another Henry Ward Beecher will be found, and if the organization is kept up its character is likely to be changed.

Thought Worthy of a Note.

"On the first Sabbath of March, and at the first communion under Dr. Withrow's pastorate, the Third Presbyterian church of Chicago received an accession of seventy members, of whom one half were on profession of faith in Christ. Among the latter were three Chinamen from the Chinese mission of the church." In announcing this fact a correspondent of the Presbyterian adds: "No extra services were held, and these welcome accessions were in no sense the result of Mr. Moody's labors in this city."

In this we see no reflection upon Mr. Moody, to whom immense credit is properly given everywhere, but a simple statement of the fact that a congregation has had large accessions, through the work of a pastor without the aid of an "evangelist." One would almost think this impossible if his opinions were to be formed from the reports made to the press from day to day. It is seldom the case that large additions to a church are reported without the accompanying statement that some revivalist has been working in the community days and weeks in advance. Even Mr. Talmadge with his sensational preaching must have an expert to hasten the fruitage by additional hot-house treatment. An exception to this method is so marked, that our esteemed contemporary makes a note of it and if we read between the lines we will find an intimation that the case cited ought to be an example. As things are now, what are called revivals are the main reliance of the church, and "specialists" are looked upon as surest agents for a "work of grace." Pastors may possibly be ploughers and sowers, but they are not reapers, and so the church itself looks upon the regular ministry as a failure which must be supplemented if not superseded by something else.

The regular ministers of the Gospel have not looked upon this with any degree of jealousy. They have been liberal to all who came professing to cast out devils in Christ's name, often questioning their own efficiency and granting latitude in methods which differed from those known from the beginning, in the hope that good would come from them. They have even looked with charity upon proceedings that were wild and senseless. The experiment has been fully and fairly tried, and the misgivings of the past have been fully justified. The tendency to revert to the old order of things as less showy but more reliable, is setting in. The verdict in a few years will be that the stated preaching of the Gospel, the administration of the sacraments and the Christian nurture of the young are after all the surest methods of promoting the salvation of men and building up the Church. Catechization is not usually perfunctory and spiritless—storing the mind without any regard to the heart; and in-gatherings proportionate to the one reported above from Chicago are not uncommon every year in some of our congregations. They are not the outcome of excited meetings held by evangelists, but the fruits of pastoral care.

His Loneliness.

The last week of our Saviour's life was of course very eventful. His agony in the garden, His arrest, trial and crucifixion, with all His momentous words and acts during these few days furnish an exhaustless theme, for surely there never was so much history crowded into so short a time. These things may be dwelt upon in meditation and in discourse as each succeeding hour brings out new features of the drama. But there were some things that marked all of His sufferings and must have added to their poignancy. One of these was His loneliness. He not only trod the wine-press, but did it alone. It was no small or insignificant matter that of the people none were with Him. The loneliness was evidently made a feature of what He was called upon to endure.

But that was not all. What was involved in that bitter cry upon the cross when He said: "My God, my God, why hast Thou forsaken me?" we may never know, for it spared us the necessity of knowing it. Here was a temporary withdrawal of the Father's face, and in that the abandonment culminated. An old legend says that Satan yelled in triumph at that awful moment, for He who had shown the power to overcome all evil was now deserted by the Almighty, and the attempt to save man had proved a failure.

His Reproach.

Another ingredient in the Saviour's cup of sorrow was the shame that fell upon Him. The cross was ignominious, and He who died upon it was covered with as much disgrace as the culprits that are hung in our jail yards. Shame will drive men to desperation quicker than anything else. And the stress was all the greater because He was holy, harmless and undefiled. To the imputation of guilt He must have been especially sensitive. Indeed it is said in God's word that it was just this "reproach" that broke His heart, and there is tremendous meaning in the fact that He endured it. The Bible emphasizes this.

The English Martyrs.

The Liverpool Catholic Times lately contained the Papal decree respecting the veneration of the English martyrs who suffered for the faith between the years 1535 and 1583. The following will be the principal effects of the decree. "The martyrs mentioned in it may be venerated in future in the same manner as those who in the past received the honor of Beatification from the Church, but not as saints who have been actually canonized. The public veneration of the English martyrs is, therefore, limited to this country, and special permission would be required from the Supreme Pontiff for their public veneration in any other part of the world. Privately they may everywhere be venerated as 'blessed servants of God.'"

It will not be allowable to dedicate any churches to them without special dispensation as that honor is reserved for the canonized saints, but altars may be erected to them and their "Office" may be said. Parents may choose them as the patrons saints of their children.

The period covered by this decree includes the age of Sir Thomas More, who as the Churchman says "doubtless commended himself to the notice of the Sacred Congregation by the epitaph which he composed for his own tomb, in which he hands himself down for the admiration of posterity as one who was 'troublesome to thieves, murderers, and heretics,' in which last category he included all who denied the papal supremacy." Our contemporary thinks Sir Thomas, or rather the Blessed Thomas as he should now be called, deserves this posthumous honor at least as well as Dominic Guzman, the founder of the order of Friar Preachers, whose chief claim to sanctity would seem to lie in his being a fierce persecutor of the Albigenses and the founder of the Inquisition. Sir

Thomas More had this advantage over the Spanish friar, that he was, at all events, a man averse to shedding blood.

We submit that it would be well for Leo to go back a century farther in English history and do something for John Wickliffe.

The Ministry of Pain.

The problem of pain is one of the profoundest of problems. The question of human suffering and and sorrow is one which has always agitated the human mind. Ages ago, Job wrestled over it, far away under eastern skies; and now, in the nineteenth century and in western lands, the wrestling goes on much the same. It is a dark subject. Of many things pertaining to it we must be content to remain in ignorance. Meanwhile, there are some things relating to the subject that are perfectly apparent; that are clearly affirmed by the Word of God, by the human consciousness, and by the experiences of human life.

The Word of God clearly recognizes and affirms the grievous character of all affliction in the experience of him who endures it. The Bible never confounds things that are distinct, and never goes against human consciousness. It never identifies pain and pleasure, sorrow and joy, so as to obliterate the distinction between the two. It seeks not to convince us that pain is not painful, that grief is not grievous. It speaks in a natural human way; respecting human reason and feeling; allowing and affirming the painfulness of pain and the grievousness of grief. No chastening seemeth to be joyous at the time, however afterward it may yield the peaceable fruits of righteousness. Sorrow may be changed into joy, and death may be swallowed up of life; yet, for all that, sorrow is sorrow and death is death; the Scriptures do not deny that. Everywhere the Word of God speaks of affliction in this human and sympathetic way. Those words of St. Paul's, in which he bids us not to sorrow as those who have no hope, how beautiful and comforting they are! And how much of their beauty and comfort comes from their lowly, tender, human, sympathetic admission of the reality and the grievous character of the sorrow. "Yea," they seem to say, "ye may sorrow, and we too will sorrow with you; only, let us not sorrow as those who have no hope." The words are so comforting because they are so human.

Nevertheless, there is the mysterious, the unmistakable, the ever-recurring affirmation of the connection between sorrow and joy. Chastening is grievous at the time, but afterwards yields the peaceable fruits of righteousness to them that are exercised thereby. Humiliation is the only pathway to glory. It is pain that disciplines us into perfection. Our afflictions are not merely succeeded by glory, but actually work out and produce for us that glory. We find our life by losing it for Christ's sake; it is by dying that we live. Such is the mysterious association constantly affirmed by the Scriptures between these two things, so different and distinct. It is thus that the Word of God identifies, by combining inseparably together, as cause and effect, things which it refuses to identify by obliterating the distinction between them.

That other Bible, the Bible of human life, speaks with the same voice. At the root of joy lies sorrow. Darkness is the mother of light, and life proceeds from death. He that has ascended the heights is he that descended first into the lowest parts. Everywhere that which is highest bears upon it in some way, the mark of the cross. Has a man surpassed others, been singled out from among them, become a teacher, a guide, a comforter, a giver of bread to his fellow-men? He has gotten that preeminence, in some way, by suffering. He has borne the yoke in his youth; he has endured severity of discipline; he has learned in the school of sorrow; he has passed through some sort of fiery trial. It would seem that the key of pain is the only key which can unlock the secret chambers of the soul in which the highest capabilities and powers reside. Very mysterious is this companionship and alliance between sorrow and joy, between discipline and dominion. Marvellous it is, that, as the poet has truly said, "Our sweetest songs are those that tell of saddest thoughts;" and that of the poets themselves, those great teachers of mankind, it may with equal truth be said, as it has been said, that they "learn in suffering what they teach in song."

Grievous is sorrow; and it is as great as it is grievous. The angel of pain has a high errand to fulfill, which no other angel can perform. The highest within us lies hidden and imprisoned, and nothing, it would appear, can reach it and set it loose until the plowshare of affliction "tears down to our primitive rock." A great musician once said of a singer whose singing gave great promise but was destitute of passion: "She sings well, but she wants something, and in that something, everything. If I were single, I would court her; I would marry her; I would maltreat her; I would break her heart; and in six months she would be the greatest singer in Europe." The remark is a singular one, but it shows great insight into the sources of excellence. It is out of the broken heart that the highest melody comes. We have seen somewhere an ancient saying to the effect that a church bell never gets its settled ring till it has tolled for a funeral. We know not how true this may be of church bells, but we know that it is true of souls; that it holds good of characters. The character of a man or a woman never gets its settled ring until it has tolled for a funeral; that is, until it has made the acquaintance of sorrow; until it has entered into kinship with the character of Him who was "a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief."

He would have learned a great lesson who should have learned the meaning of sorrow, the mission of suffering, the ministry of pain. To our anxious and bewildered questionings on this dark and mysterious subject, there is but one satisfying answer. And that is no written or spoken word. It is the Cross of Jesus Christ our Lord.

Rededication at Emlenton.

There is a very live and active Reformed congregation at Emlenton in Venango Co., Pa., on the Allegheny Valley R. R. about 30 miles south of Oil City. The present popular pastor is Rev. J. F. Mackley, who succeeded Rev. R. C. Bowling about a year ago. The church in which this congregation worships was formerly owned jointly with the Lutherans. Under the pastorate of Rev. Bowling the Lutheran interest was purchased for $1200 and the outside of the building and surroundings put into thorough repair, and the general appearance very greatly improved. In fact it did not look like the same building, the glory of the latter house far exceeding that of the former. Much credit is due B. O. Bowling and the congregation under his care for these steps in advance. One good feature that should not be forgotten, was, that everything was promptly paid for, and no heavy debt was ever allowed to crush the life out of the congregation.

Some time last summer work was begun on the inside of the church, as there was a feeling that it was not best to have the outside clean and beautiful and the inside dingy and uninviting. Everything was made new but part of the floor. The pews, pulpit, altar and chancel railing are of hard wood, nicely finished. The papering, carpets, matting, &c., are in perfect keeping with the furniture. The audience room in all its parts is neat and attractive and constitutes a pleasant place of worship. The whole expense of the present improvement is $850.

The rededication of this church took place on Sunday morning, March 13th. Services were held by the pastor during three evenings of the previous week. The liturgical services and act of dedication on Sunday morning were read by the pastor, and the sermon was preached by Rev. D. B. Lady of Cuvillsville. $200 of the cost of the repairs remained unpaid for, and considerable anxiety was felt by the pastor and others lest the amount could not be raised. But the people had a mind to work and were of a willing mind, and in response to a statement and an appeal from the pastor for contributions the debt was soon covered with cash and subscriptions, and the beautified and improved building was set apart with joyful hearts to the service of the Triune God. A very large audience assembled in the evening, when Rev. Fox of the Lutheran church assisted in the devotional service, whilst the sermon was again preached by Rev. Lady. It is felt on all sides that an auspicious beginning has been made in the renewed church. Pastor and people feel much encouraged, and no doubt a bright future of success awaits their efforts to build up Christ's Kingdom.

Do not forget to send us promptly the number of members received and the amount contributed, during the Easter Season.

Among our Exchanges.

The Christian Advocate makes this good point:

"A very sad case is reported of a young lady who tripped and fell while engaged in a dance, and sustained an injury which culminated in paralysis. This does not offer a subject for moralizing; for the right or wrong of things is not to be determined by accidents. An intelligent Christian lady fell while visiting a sick neighbor, and was disabled for months. Ministers of the Gospel have been attacked by fatal hemorrhages while preaching the word in the pulpit. The time has passed when any good impression can be made by conclusions that do not rest upon truth."

In the following we agree entirely with the Lutheran Standard:

"So sacred a thing as prayer, in which the soul presents itself before God to make known its requests, might be thought exempt from such abuse as that to which an exchange refers under the heading, 'Prayer as a Means of Personal Abuse.' But there is nothing too holy for profanation by sinful man. It is a fact that some people are base enough to 'pray at' people, instead of praying to God, and to use prayer as a means of lecturing their fellow-men, or perhaps even of giving vent to their spite against individuals. And such wickedness is just as likely to take place at the prayer meetings of those who profess to be perfectly sanctified as anywhere else. That such a prostitution of prayer is abhorred by all sincere Christians, when they once observe it and see its import, is certain; but some are so thoughtless as not to observe it and not to realize its wicked character. This and other abuses add their share of evidence in favor of carefully prepared forms of prayer, which express the desires of believing hearts, and leave no room for the utterance of mere individual opinion and sentiment, abusive or otherwise."

The New York Evening Post has these sensible remarks:

"We believe it to be susceptible of demonstration that the late extraordinary and deplorable increase of crime, an increase more palpable every day, crowding with its record the columns of the public prints, and sickening the soul with its endless detail and novelty of horror, is largely due to the growth of materialism, or what is termed infidelity; and that mainly in reaction from the skeptical drift of the time, lies the path of wholesome reform. The fruit of unbelief among the upper or wealthy classes is sensuality. Those classes get to worship, instead of their Maker, the pleasures of the moment. They bow down to rich food and fine clothes and enervating amusements. They make goddesses of women who possess mere physical beauty. Their hearts are set on yachts and race-courses and theatres and operas. What is given, in a word, to gild or soften life, to lend grace and sparkle and color to the plod and monotone of existence, such persons make its sole object and aim. Thus they become the earth worshipers, and all that is spiritual and exalted dries out of their souls. One after another the Commandments are broken as they stand in the way of desire, and a shameful ruin is left at last in place of what might have been a perfect temple; a shattered and sated voluptuary in place of a nobly perfected being."

It is gratifying to know that a movement has been made in England to correct the evil spoken of in the above. The New York Evangelist thus sums it up:

"A memorial signed by a representative body of English clergy and laity, including such names as the Archbishop of Canterbury, Cardinal Manning, Mr. Gladstone, the late Lord Iddesleigh, and Prof. Huxley, has been addressed to the daily press, in which they ask the press for 'some combined action by which they may minimize, if they cannot wholly suppress, the details of divorce cases and criminal trials.' They admit that the fear of publicity is a useful curb. They are aware that the suppression of reports in any form might lead to serious inconvenience and harm. But they reasonably contend that 'the necessary publicity could be secured without the divulgence of details of a demoralizing character.' They desire further to call attention to the inevitable evils which must result from thus familiarizing with vice the minds of tens of thousands of young persons of both sexes, from whom in these days it is impossible to keep the daily newspapers. They 'do not reflect for one moment on the motives of any who have considered it part of their duty to publish full reports of these trials, but are sure that a combined effort to keep the pages of newspapers as free as possible from the stain of such impurities, would be conducive to the public good.'"

Church Dedication.

The Zion's Reformed church, located about four miles south of Dayton, Ohio, was solemnly dedicated to the service of the Triune God, on Sunday forenoon, March 13, 1887. The former house of worship, jointly owned and occupied by the Reformed and Lutheran congregations since 1860, was demolished by a cyclone on the 12th of May, 1886. After the question of rebuilding the "union" church was agitated for a while, the Reformed congregation, in accordance with a proposition from the Lutherans, bought the interest of the Lutheran congregation for $500, and, having become the owners of the whole property, have erected a one-story building on the old foundation. This house, constructed of brick, 45x65 feet, with a tower in front, is a substantial structure and makes a good appearance.

The solemn services were commenced with a voluntary by the choir, followed by an invocation, singing, reading of Scripture and prayer. Then the pastor, Rev. J. B. Henry, read an interesting historical sketch of the congregation from the time of its organization in 1820 to the present. The dedicatory sermon, appropriate to the occasion, was preached from Genesis 28: 16-22, by Rev. G. W. Willard, D.D., and the other ministers present, besides the pastor, and participating in the services, were Revs. M. Loucks and I. H. Reiter, D.D. A large and appreciating congregation was in attendance, numbering 600 or 700 people, and filling the house to overflowing.

Now the attention of the audience was directed to the financial necessity of the congregation. It was announced that about $1,200 were needed to clear the church of all indebtedness. In view of this, Dr. Willard made an earnest and effectual appeal to the audience for "material aid," and liberal contributions. As a tangible response, about $700 were at once raised, leaving a balance of $500 to be provided for, which will be done in the near future; and thus will be met the total cost of the building, which is about $3,200. The pastor then performed the solemn act of dedication.

The fact of the erection and dedication of this church edifice (which is the third in the order of time, the first having been built between 1818 and 1820), marks an important epoch in the history of the Zion's Reformed congregation, which is now in full possession of its own church property.

The pastor has the confidence and mutual co-operation of his membership, and his labors are appreciated by his people, and he has encouraging prospects of usefulness before him.

Church Work Convention.

The third of a series of church work conventions within the bounds of Lancaster Classis was held in Trinity Reformed church, Columbia, Pa., March 9th. Notwithstanding the very unfavorable weather a good-sized audience gathered to listen to the discussions on practical church work that took place. After devotional services Rev. S. M. Roeder, of Elizabethtown, Pa., spoke on "The duty of parents to the children of the church before confirmation." The address was one of much practical force. Rev. D. B. Schneider of Marietta, Pa., next addressed the convention on the subject "The duty of members of the church to those recently confirmed." The speaker emphasized the great importance of watchful, tender care over those who have just been brought into full communion with the church. Rev. W. J. Johnson, of Manheim, Pa., concluded with an eloquent address on "The duty of members of the church to their acquaintances who are not members of the church." The work of bringing into the church one's unsaved acquaintances and friends was shown to be not only a duty but a high privilege. Several anthems sung by the choir were very fine, and altogether the occasion was one of much pleasure and, no doubt, lasting profit. The pastor of the Columbia church, Rev. J. H. Pannebecker, who prepared the programme, and presided over the convention, lays unusual but not unnecessary stress upon active, faithful work on the part of church members, not merely for the temporal, but much more for the spiritual up-building of the church; and it is a pleasure to know that his members are getting more and more into sympathy with him in this respect.

Notes from Ursinus College.

The winter term of the seventeenth year of Ursinus College was closed March 24th with the anniversary of the Zwinglean Literary Society. It has been the custom of the school to finish the work of every session with a public occasion, giving a proper culmination to its studies and exercises. The Zwinglean Society was organized as soon as the college was founded, thus making the present anniversary its seventeenth. Rev. J. W. Meminger, of Chester county, offered the invocation, and the following gentlemen furnished the literary feast: Salutory, H. E. Kratz, '90, Trappe; oration, Edwin W. Sentz, '89, Myerstown; oration, O. H. E. Ranch, '89, Slainington; oration, Howard T. Boyer, '88, Collegeville; eulogy, C. U. O. Derr, '88, Reading; Zwinglean oration, Thaddeus S. Krause, '87, Plumsteadville, Bucks county. The music was furnished by a Zuther Quartette and a harpist of Philadelphia. The speakers acquitted themselves with more than ordinary credit, showing by the treatment of their subjects that they think and write for themselves. The college chapel was crowded with friends and spectators, who gave frequent evidence of approval and delight.

In addition to the social and intellectual diversions afforded by the associations, lyceums and families of the community, the routine of regular college work was broken during the term by three lectures, a concert, and an open meeting of the Olevian, the young ladies' literary society. The first lecture was given under the auspices of the joint literary societies, January 13th, by Wallace Bouce, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y. On January 20th, President Magill, LL.D., of Swarthmore, delivered his lecture on Teaching and Teacher-training. It was highly appreciated by the students and the public. On February 8th Rev. D. E. Klopp, D.D., of Philadelphia, lectured for the young ladies' society. The concert was given March 11th by the Y. P. A. of St. Luke's church, with Miss Dora Schaeffer, of Harrisburg, Miss Ica Moyer, of Freeburg, and Mr. F. C. Moyer, organist 1st Reformed church, Reading, as the talent from abroad. The annual open meeting of the Olevian Literary Society took place March 18th, and attracted a large audience. Such a series of entertainments scattered throughout the term furnishes a course of rational enjoyment, that affords the necessary relief from constant application, and at the same time stimulates to renewed study.

A slight change in the administration of the institution was inaugurated this term which allows the young men to procure meals at approved places in the village, while still requiring them to lodge in the college buildings. It has always been regarded as a cardinal principle in the government of the institution that students should be under the direct oversight and restraining influence of the Professors, not only during recitation periods, but also during study hours. There has been sufficient experiment made to show that the scholarship of a student suffers as soon as he passes beyond the requirement of regular hours for study, recreation and rest. This can be secured only by having the students room in the college with the Professors.

Whilst seeking to allay the discontent which seems to be inseparable from enforced boarding at one table by allowing the students to procure meals elsewhere, the college will continue to maintain the careful family government which parents and friends have learned to trust at Ursinus.

The internal work of the college during the term has been satisfactory in all respects. The health of professors and students has been preserved, and regular recitations maintained. The number of students in attendance exceeded that of a year ago. In this respect there has been a steady growth for four or five years, and the present bids fair to outrun any year in the history of the college. As the permanence and character of the institution become better known and understood, the number of friends and patrons increases. Ursinus has every reason to thank God, and take courage.

The spring term of twelve weeks will open April 4th. In the Preparatory Department, beginning classes will be formed in the varied branches of study, so that new students can enter without disadvantage. S.

Gifts for Sendai.

EDITOR MESSENGER:—Noticing in the MESSENGER of 16th March the liberal gift of Rev. J. I. Swander and wife, of Fremont, Ohio, who have given $1100 to purchase a lot in Sendai, Japan, in the hope that others will give the money needed for the missionary building, we thought we ought to give all we could to let the poor, ignorant heathen people have a building where they could be taught the Bible, as we are every Sunday in our church and Sunday-school. If five thousand of our church members and Sunday-school scholars would give two dollars each, which is only a penny a day for about half a year, the good missionaries who have left their homes and friends here to work among the heathen, would have enough to put up the buildings they need. We enclose you ten dollars, being two dollars from each of us, which please send to Japan as our offering for Lent as members of the Sunday-school of the 2nd Reformed church, Reading, Pa.

Thirty-First Anniversary of the Maryland S. S. Union.

The thirty-first anniversary of the Maryland S. S. Union was held in the Academy of Music, Baltimore, on the evening of the 23rd. The president, G. S. Griffith, presided. Many were present. The different pastors of the Reformed church in the city with those of other denominations were in attendance. The music, which was very fine, one piece—The Greeting Song—being dedicated to the president, G. S. Griffith, by its author, the leader, was under the direction of Prof. J. G. Robinson.

President Griffith read his annual report—covering the period from February 15, 1886, to February 15, 1887. The report referred to the need of more means for broader and deeper work. The chief mission of the organization is to organize Sunday-school work and to elevate its standard. During the year 12,635 children have been admitted to full membership in the churches of the State. The report further says: "Another very pleasing matter to report is the steadily increasing harmony and fraternity between the various denominations, the members of which, coming together in our meetings, cast aside for the time being all minor differences in church policy and labor together in a spirit of unity." On the question of interpenetration the report says: "Christian people cannot observe without sadness and alarm the ravages which intemperance is making in our State. Whatever may be the result to personal business or political party, it behooves especially every instructor of youth to antagonize this evil with all the vigor of a Christian manhood. In our efforts to help and rescue the children of the masses we find this giant in our pathway; and while the conscientious teacher labors to awaken higher thought and motive in the mind of the little one he has picked up from the wayside, his work is oftentimes negated by the moral foulness of a home poisoned, pauperized and wrecked by the neighboring rum-shop." There were $3,188.58 received during the year and $3,065.08 expended, leaving a balance of $123.50. To carry forward the work of the present year $500 is necessary. During the year the union employed five missionaries, including the superintendent. They organized 26 schools and reorganized 17, aggregating 3,388 members; number of children placed in schools by cards, 4,969; families visited, 8,907; miles traveled, 6,429; tracts and papers distributed, 22,820; sermons and addresses delivered, 583; union and cottage prayer meetings held, 63. There are in Maryland 2,241 Sunday-schools, containing 27,419 officers and teachers and 252,550 scholars. Referring to the work among the colored people, the report says: "Those interested in this phase of the union's work have great reason for thankfulness because of the remarkable advancement which the colored people are making in the State." Thanks are given the Maryland Bible Society for aid.

Addresses were made by Revs. A. H. Studebaker and F. W. Gunsauls. The occasion was a very delightful and interesting one.—Baltimore Sun.

Resolutions of Condolence.

The following preamble and resolutions were adopted by the Reformed Missionary Society of Bloomsburg.

WHEREAS, It has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from our midst Mrs. Emma Neal, who has been an efficient Vice-President and faithful worker of our Missionary Society, since its organization, therefore,

Resolved, That while we shall miss her from our numbers, we mourn not as those who are without hope, but submissively bow to the will of our Heavenly Father, who knoweth all things best.

Resolved, That the Missionary Society extend its sympathy to the afflicted family, praying that the hand of God may sustain her husband in his sad bereavement, and that He may care tenderly for the motherless children.

Resolved, That as an affectionate mother, kind wife and Christian lady, too much cannot be said of her; that we deeply feel the loss of our sister in the Society and in the Church.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, and also that they be published in the Reformed MESSENGER and the Bloomsburg papers.

Our Own Church.

Pennsylvania.

St. Clairsville.—Trinity Missionary Society of the Reformed church at St. Clairsville celebrated its fifth anniversary on the evening of the 20th of March. The exercises of this meeting were of a special character, and included, besides literary selections rendered by several members, reports of the past year's work by the secretary, treasurer and president. Rev. C. S. Slagle, of Cessna, and Rev. Mr. Rice, of the Lutheran church, were present, and delivered good and appropriate addresses. The society consists of about 100 members, with an average monthly contribution of seven or eight cents. Its members all feel encouraged, for during the past year more has been accomplished than ever before. To God be all the praise.

Irwin.—Larimer.—Communion services were held at Larimer on the 20th inst. Rev. A. E. Truxal, pastor. Twenty four persons were received into membership, and sixteen children by baptism. This congregation is in a very flourishing condition, has a very creditable church all paid for, and its membership nearly 100. Rev. H. F. Keener assisted the pastor.

Shippensburg.—The good people of the Reformed congregation of this place, gave their newly installed pastor, Rev. J. David Miller and family, recently, a public reception in the church. D. W. Plasterer, Esq., the secretary of the consistory, made the address of welcome. To this address, Rev. Miller responded at some length.

But while this ceremony was being proceeded with, another scene was being enacted at the parsonage. The members, before proceeding to the church, each stopped at the residence of the pastor, and left a package, so that, when the reception was concluded at the church and the preacher and family returned to their home, they found there quite an array of good things, consisting of the necessities of life in great abundance and variety. Even the faithful housewife, who had traveled over five mountains from Martinsburg, Pa., to Shippensburg, was not forgotten.—News.

York.—Heidelberg.—The members of the Bible class of the pastor, Rev. F. J. Sauerberg, have presented him with a beautiful stand for the pulpit. It is finished in the most artistic style and is made of poplar and maple wood. We learn from "The Age" that the pastor is popular and the congregation under his care rapidly growing.

Philadelphia.—The third Sunday of March was a day of blessing and great rejoicing to the members of St. Mark's congregation of this city. It was the tenth anniversary of the ordination of their pastor, Rev. G. A. Scheer, which they resolved to celebrate in a becoming manner. Their pastor had, however, preached for one year previous to his ordination, whilst yet pursuing his studies in the Theological Seminary. As the Rev. Dr. J. Kuelling was a member of the committee of ordination, he was invited to preach the anniversary sermon, the other two members being Dr. J. Duhman and Dr. N. Gehr. Dr. Kuelling accepted the invitation, and preached in the forenoon from Psalm 115: 1, pointing out, first, in a historical sketch the reasons, and secondly, the object of honor and praise. Dr. Gehr took part in the liturgical service. In the afternoon Dr. Kuelling addressed the Sunday-school. The evening was set apart for the young people of the congregation, for all those confirmed by the pastor since his ordination, on which occasion short addresses were delivered by Dr. Kuelling and Dr. Gehr. As the weather was favorable, the congregation turned out in full force, especially in the evening, occupying every available space of the large church. The pulpit and the altar space were neatly decorated with palm trees and flowers. Their pastor was also kindly remembered, his Consistory having presented to him on the previous evening a valuable mantle-clock, and the Ladies' Aid Society a fine walnut book case.

Zion.—On the 23rd inst., the Rev. John W. Pontius resigned his pastorate of the Zion's charge, Crawford county, Pa., to take effect June 11th, 1887. A committee has been appointed by the joint consistories to secure a pastor. The chairman of this committee is Geo. McDaniel, Cochran, Crawford county, Pa.

Martinsburg.—The Rev. John W. Pontius has accepted a call to the Martinsburg charge, and intends to begin his work there about the 20th of June, 1887.

Ohio.

Fairfield.—Rev. A. Casselman, pastor.—The winter communions have been held in each congregation of this charge. Nine adults were received into full membership in connection with these services, and several children baptized. For some months past, however, attention has been given especially toward refitting and repairing the several church buildings. Bethel was first, and was treated to a fine new carpet, and rearranging of pews early last fall, at a cost of about $150. Next came Union, where both church building and membership were formerly in a dilapidated condition. A year ago the membership was doubled and as one of the results the church building was re-roofed, frescoed in oil, pews and woodwork varnished, outside woodwork painted and the entire floor nicely carpeted, etc., at a cost of about

A LIBERAL OFFER.

$475. The last was the Fairfield church, which has just recently been completed, so far as inside repairs are concerned. Some outside work will be done in the near future. In the place of the uncomfortable and unhealthy stoves a furnace was put in. The rooms all frescoed in oil. The pews and woodwork varnished, the room finely carpeted throughout, and some other repairs at a total cost of about $600. They now have three beautiful temples in which to worship God, and an increasing and appreciative membership.

Bremen.—Communion services were held here February 20th. Eight new members were added, and two others are expected to unite with the church soon. The organization here has only been in existence about five years, and has had obstacles to overcome. But the prospects bid fair for a promising future. The Lord's Supper was administered at Jerusalem, March 13th. There were three addition to the church on Saturday at the preparatory services. Fifteen others besides, have been added to this congregation during the winter, making in all over fifty accessions to the charge in the past three months. During a pastorate of nearly two years and ten months, 103 persons have been received into church. Rev. F. M. Shults is pastor.

Stoutsville.—The Lord's Supper was celebrated in two congregations of the Stoutsville charge on the 6th and 13th inst. Rev. G. W. H. Smith of Lancaster, O., kindly assisted at Mt. Carmel. There were nine accessions—eight by confirmation and one by certificate—three were heads of families. At Stoutsville the pastor was assisted by Rev. B. Frank Davis of Kinnickinnick. There were two accessions—one by confirmation and one by certificate—one was the head of a family.

Illinois.
Foreston.—Rev. H. Bair, having accepted a call from the Foreston Charge, his correspondents will please address him at Foreston, Ogles Co., Ill., instead of Liscomb, Marshall Co., Iowa, after the 28th of March, 1887.

Iowa.

Liscomb.—Four members were added to the Liscomb Mission, at our late communion. Two were added by letter on the 13th of March, 1887, at Liscomb, Iowa, and two by confirmation, to St. Paul's congregation, near Grundy Center, Iowa, on the 20th inst.

Wisconsin.

Sheboygan.—Mission House.—The Board of Trustees of the mission house at Sheboygan, Wisconsin, have resolved to erect a new building, which is to be three stories high, 35x90 feet, with a wing 35x50 feet. It will require 60,000 brick, and the total cost will be at least $20,000. About $6,000 have already been secured, but on safe and economical principles, the erection of the building has now been deferred until next year. Meanwhile earnest efforts will be put forth to raise the needed funds among the yet unsolicited congregations of the German Synods. This building seems to be needed because of the lack of room in the old building for the accommodation of the students.

TERMS OF THE MESSENGER:

$2.00 a year, in advance, postage included. Six copies to one address for one year, $10.00.
No paper discontinued, except at the option of the publisher, unless orders are sent direct to the Publication Office, at least two weeks before the time subscribed for expires, and all arrears are paid.

The publishers will not be responsible for notice given to an agent or postmaster.
When arrears for more than a year are due, they are collected through a solicitor.

The date appended to the subscriber's name on the slip pasted on each paper, indicates the day and year to which he has paid.

Renewals should be made, if possible, before the date transpires. If two issues are allowed to be sent after that time, and a notice to discontinue is then received, the subscriber will be charged for the six months commenced.

Remittances should be made by Check, Draft, Postal Money Order or Registered Letter, and to be made payable to the order of the Reformed Church Publication Board.
Should you remit, and on examining the label on your paper you do not find the proper credit given after two weeks have elapsed, please inform us by postal, so that any failure to reach us may be discovered, or any mistake or omission may be corrected.

We do make mistakes sometimes, and we want the aid of pastors, agents and all interested, in correcting them.

Communications for the paper, to insure prompt insertion, should be addressed to "The Messenger."

PLEASE NOTICE TAG ON YOUR PAPER

AND IF YOU ARE INDEBTED FOR SUBSCRIPTIONS, REMIT WITHOUT DELAY. SUBSCRIPTIONS ARE DUE IN ADVANCE.

Miscellaneous.

Good Friday's Cross.

[BY THE REV. MARTYN SUMMERRELL, M.A.

Bearing the cross, the Roman cross,
Fainting, my Saviour passes by;
Up to the hill where One must die,
In bitter shame and misery,
Ransom for many on Calvary.

Under the cross, the rugged cross,
Scowling rabbis their hate betray;
Rude soldiers gamble His robes away,
And the rabble scoffs the living day,
"If Thou be the Christ come down!" they say,

Stretched on the cross, the loving cross,
God's Paschal Lamb is offered there;
Redemption's gift beyond compare,
Whose fruits these cruel men may share:
"Father, forgive them!" Christlike prayer.

Over the cross, the royal cross,
Nature rolls tempest and midnight haze.
But above night and cloud, in radiant maze,
The Heavenly Hosts triumphant praise
God's miracle in atoning grace.

Close to the cross, my Saviour's cross,
Burdened with doubt and sin I flee,
At His smile my heart leaps joyously—
Shadows depart, and Heaven I see Perfect in Christ's sympathy.

—Episcopal Recorder.

Selections.

Regard no vice so small that thou mayest
brook it, no virtue so small that thou mayest overlook it.—Oriental.

It is much safer to obey than to govern.
Who is so wise that he can fully know all things? Be not, therefore, too confident in thine opinion, but be willing to hear the judgment of others.—Thomas a Kempis.

It is not enough that believers reckon themselves "dead unto sin." For there is no power in death. It is therefore a double reckoning to which we are called—"but alive unto God, through Jesus Christ the Lord." And that alone makes the reckoning effective.

It is hard to find a better definition of Faith
than that of a poor Irish child, taught in a mission school in Ireland. And his reply was, "Sure, and it's just grasping Christ in the heart." All the promises take their appointed place, and speak their true meaning,
when He is in the centre.

"He suffered!" Was it, Lord, indeed for me.
The just One for the unjust, Thou didst bear
The weight of sorrow that I hardly dare
To look upon, in dark Gethsemane?
"He suffered!" Thou, my near and gracious Friend,

And yet my Lord, my God! Thou didst not shrink
For me that full and fearful cup to drink,
Because Thou lovest even to the end!
"He suffered!" Saviour, was Thy love so vast

That mysteries of unknown agony,
Even unto death, its only gauge could be,
Unmeasured as the fiery depths it passed?
Lord, by the sorrows of Gethsemane
Seal Thou my quivering love forever unto Thee.

Personal.

King William of Holland recently celebrated the seventieth anniversary of his birth. In almost every Netherland village and town there were great festivities; in every church a service was held; and there was a general distribution of bounty to the poor.

The list of preachers who will occupy the Cornell University pulpit next term under the Sage endowment includes the Revs.
Francis G. Peabody, of Cambridge; William
H. Ward, of New York; Edward Everett Hale, Washington Gladden, and F. L. Patton, and Bishops Cox, of Buffalo, and Fowler,
of San Francisco.

Mrs. H. C. Dana, of Cambridge, Mass., writes that his father, Richard H. Dana, was offered by the publishers only $250 for his famous sea story, "Two Years Before the Mast," and not $1,000, as had been related.
Mr. Dana did not even receive the $250 in full, for interest was deducted from it when the payment was made.

Ex Vice-President Wheeler is reported by a late visitor to his home at Malone as busy with his correspondence. He was cheerful, cordial, and vigorous in conversation. His health is seriously impaired, but not so as to prostrate him or confine him to his house.
He has survived his parents, brothers, sisters,
and wife, and now lives alone, childless, and without a near relative in the world, and these bereavements have, of course, saddened him,
but they have not broken him.

Science and Art.

The military authorities in India have under consideration the introduction of ballooning into India, and have deputed an officer to the Roorkee Engineering College on the special duty of preparing a scheme with that object.

Dr. C. Keller, of Zurich, finds reason for believing that spiders destroy more aphides
and insect enemies of trees than do the insect-eating birds. His views have been verified by observations on coniferous trees, a few broad-leaved trees and apple trees.

TO THE PERSIAN GULF.—M. Eude, a civil engineer of Paris, has just presented to the Academy of Sciences the details of a scheme to cut a gigantic canal through Syria and Persia, thereby uniting the Mediterranean with the Persian Gulf. This canal would shorten the route from Europe to Asia by three days.

Russian geographers report that numerous lakes in Siberia, chiefly in the Tobolsk and Tomsk provinces, are rapidly drying up, and that villages now stand on spots covered by extensive sheets of water 100 years ago.
Lake Tchekaly has shown the most remarkable change, its area being 350 square miles
a century ago, while it now consists of three small ponds, the largest not covering more than five or six square miles.

The Von Borries compound locomotives running in Germany, are claimed to show a saving in consumption of fuel over the ordinary engine, varying with different services on various lines from 10½ per cent. on freight trains between Hanover and Minden,
for three winter months of 1882-83 to 21
per cent. on freight run on the Gottingen-Hanover and Gottingen-Cassel lines for the nine months from July 1, 1883, to April 1, 1884. The cost of the compound locomotives is said by Von Borries to be 2½ per cent.
greater than that of the ordinary locomotive.

Items of Interest.

The Minister of Finance of Germany recently stated, in a public debate, that $500, 000,000 (?) were annually spent by the whole German Empire upon liquor and tobacco.

Belgium has passed a law making drunkenness a crime. This would be regarded as an unconstitutional, hard law here. It interferes with a man's pleasure and the inalienable right to make a beast of himself.—Mobile Telegraph.

The thimble of plain sewing was invented
in the year 1684 by a gallant young Dutch goldsmith of Amsterdam, who devised the "thumb-bell" (for this was its original name)
in order to protect his sweetheart's thumb-tips when she was engaged with a needle
and cotton.

It is predicted that what is called the "Star of Bethlehem" will appear this year for the sixth time since the birth of Christ.
This star is said to appear directly north of the north star, and to be visible, in its dazzling light, at noonday. It is many times the magnitude of our sun.

Paris has a thoroughly organized carrier
pigeon service, by which missives can be sent to neighboring forts and towns and even to distant places in the Provinces. The staff comprises 2,500 trained birds. The utility of this service during the siege has led to its continuance and perfection.

A curious paper by an English organist
upon "Melody in Speech" asserts that a cow
moos in a perfect fifth and octave or tenth;
a dog barks in a fifth or fourth; a donkey
brays in a perfect octave; a horse neighs in a descent on the chromatic scale. Each person has his fundamental key in which he generally speaks, but which he often transposes in,
sympathy to other voices, or when he is excited.

In consequence of recent calamities due to stoves in cars, the officials of the Northern Pacific have decided to experiment with an iron car from which the cars of the train will be supplied not only with heat, but with light and water. It is proposed to have the car next to the engine, so that connection
when the engine is cut off may not be broken with the rest of the train. Whether electricity or gas for lighting the train will be used,
is not yet determined upon.

The number of applications for patents in the United States, with our 60,000,000 inhabitants, last year, was 21,797, while in Great Britain and Ireland, with a population of about 40,000,000, the number of applications was 17,162, which makes the ratio of ingenuity not very different in the English speaking countries. France comes next on the list, judging by the number of applications for patents, and Germany stands next to France.

The reading of the will of the late Pope Pius IX., was an occasion of disappointment to some of that Pontiff's relatives. His paternal property did not amount to $10,000,
and this might be called the only sure part of the inheritance, two-thirds of which fell to Girolamo, the eldest son of Ercole, and one-third to Christina, only daughter of Luigi.
Donna Teresa Mastai, who was a lady of lively spirit, asked, when the reading terminated, whether there was anything more;
and hearing from the Chancellor that there was nothing, she rose from her seat and said
to her relations in a marked ironical tone,
"And now, gentlemen, we may go away."
On descending the stairs of the Vatican, the same lady turned to her relations and said,
"It seems a nice hoax, gentlemen, for all of us." And she added, turning to Count Augusti, "Really, it was unnecessary to make us come up here to listen to such a will."

Useful Hints and Recipes.

Have a zinc-covered shelf back of your kitchen stove placed conveniently high, upon which put unused lids, or the hot tea kettle,
or any other hot kitchen utensil.

THE MOTHS.—Those who have encountered the Buffalo moth, say that the use of borax unsparingly under carpets, in corners of rooms, and in closets, will soon conquer the terrible pest.

SARDINE TOAST.—Take some sardines, carefully skin and bone them, lay them on slices of buttered toast, with a few drops of lemon juice, and put them into the oven with a buttered paper over to get quite hot. Serve at once.

FLAVORING.—In the latter part of the winter, when apples seem a little lacking in flavor, a pleasant variation is made by cooking them with oranges—three or four parts of apple to one of orange—or a little ginger root
with the apple makes a very pleasant change.
In either case it is best to use rather more sugar than for ordinary apple sauce, making a syrup before as described, and dropping the fruit into it.

This neat volume contains fourteen earnest practical discourses on the subject of prayer. They will do much good and should be widely circulated and read.

ELEMENTS OF ENGLISH. An Introduction to English Grammar, for the use of schools.
By George Hodgdon Ricker, A.M. The Interstate Publishing Company, Chicago and Boston. Price 30 cents.

The author says: "This little book has been written with the hope of making this branch of school study less difficult, more attractive and more useful to young pupils.
The work is elementary. It is designed to be used in the lower grades of schools, and to prepare the pupil for the study of larger works on language and grammar. It consists of a series of lessons, treating of the parts of speech and their use," of the simple sentence in its various forms, fully illustrated
by practical exercises composed of common words in daily use. . . . It also contains practical lessons on spelling, capital letters, and punctuation. Directions for letter-writing are briefly and clearly stated and illustrated. The principles of analysis and synthesis are concisely stated, followed by brief methods of parsing."

SCENES IN SOUTHERN INDIA. By Mrs.
Murry Mitchell. With numerous illustrations. American Tract Society, 150 Nassau street, New York. Pp. 372. Price $1.50.
For sale at Depository, 1512 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

This book refers more especially to Southern India, where missionary work began a century earlier than in Bengal and Bombay,
and this part of the territory is properly
brought into comparison with the north.
The work is in a measure the journal of a lady who had large opportunities for observation, and is not confined to missionary work, but gives descriptions of scenes and incidents in the country that help to portray the characteristics of the people. It is well written and interesting, and should be extensively read.

OURS WITH THE BIBLE. By Cunningham
Geike, D.D. New York: John B. Alden.
Six vols. Price $3.30.

No notice, we believe, has as yet appeared in the MESSENGER of this celebrated and important work, and as the sixth volume of the republishing by Alden is about to be issued,
we deem it a proper time to bring the book to the attention of our readers. In it the author, so well known by his earlier work,
"The Life and Words of Christ," gives to the public the results of his studies in the Old Testament Scriptures viewed in the light of modern research and knowledge. It traverses the whole field of Biblical history
from creation to Malachi, explaining difficulties, meeting objections, clearing up obscurities—in short, serving as a valuable as well as interesting commentary on the Scriptures. It is the product of extensive and accurate scholarship. The author, who is well equipped for his task, has employed all available sources for the elucidation of the subject, making use especially of the latest researches in Egyptology and Assyri-ology. The book will prove of great value to ministers, and in the study of lessons taken from the Old Testament. Sunday-school teachers could not well find a better help.
The extremely low price, $2.30 for six vols.,
put up in excellent form, brings it within the reach of all.

THE PHAROHS OF THE BONDAGE AND THE EXODUS. By Charles S. Robinson, D.D.
The Century Co., New York. Pp. 199.
Price 50 cents.

This is a course of thirteen lectures delivered by the author to his congregation. The immediate occasion seems to have been the remarkable discovery in 1881 of a large number of mummies in an out-of-the-way sepulchre on the banks of the Upper Nile, of which the second lecture gives an interesting account. The aim of the book is apologetic, and the author makes these mummies yield
their silent testimony to the truth of the Old Testament Scriptures. The lectures are written in a popular and interesting style,
they are both instructive and edifying, but unfortunately they display a defective knowledge of the better scientific criticism of the age.

HISTORY OF JAPAN. The German Publishing House of the Reformed Church of the United States has issued a "History of the Empire of Japan," the proceeds of which are to go to the Board of Foreign Missions.
The work is a pamphlet of eighty-four pages,
with a number of good illustrations. It is written in the German language, and comes from the pen of Rev. A. Schade, pastor of the Sixth Reformed church, Cleveland, Ohio.
Price 15 cents; postage 3 cents. Address
August Becker, Agent, 991 Scranton avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

THE ANDOVER REVIEW, March, 1887.
The opening article by Prof. Everett on the Poems of Emerson will be read with pleasure by all lovers of literature. We doubt not that it will give to many, as it has to ourselves, a new insight into Emerson. The writer, while not blind to the poet's defects, especially as regards external form, dwells with loving sympathy on the strength, the imagination, the passion and the catholicity manifested in the poems. We question, however, whether most of his readers will assign as high a place to Emerson among the poets, as he himself does. "The Mind Cure: Its Philosophy and Limitations," by Dr. Denison, discusses an important subject.
Such are the close relations of the mind to the body that there can be no doubt the former exerts a curative effect on the latter.
It is a field, however, on which much obscurity still rests, and whatever tends to throw light upon it, as this article does,
should be heartily welcomed. "Some Principles of Church Development in Japan" forms the subject of an article by Rev. Edward Lawrence, in which he shows how the Japanese section of the Church of Christ is to day working out the two great principles of independence and unity. As the writer is himself a missionary in that interesting country, his thoughts are worth a careful consideration. The readers of the Andover already have a familiar acquaintance with the Rev. Francis H. Johnson who, in this number, writes of "Creation and Salvation,"

and maintains that the two are only different aspects of one process. The editorial notes
this month are all good. That on Christianity and its Competitors takes up Humanitarianism, and shows its weakness over against the Gospel. Besides, the department of Philosophical Criticism contains a valuable article by Prof. Tolman on "The Laws of Tone-Color in the English Language,"

Funk & Wagnalls, 18 and 20 Astor Place,
New York, announce a new edition of Dr.
Lyman Abbott's "Henry Ward Beecher, his Life and Characteristics with Analyses of his Power as a Preacher, Lecturer, Orator and Journalist." This new edition will bring the work down to the close of the great preacher's life. The work will contain over a hundred portraits of Mr. Beecher representing him at different ages and in different moods; with portraits of other members of his family, making it a splendid memorial volume. S. B. Halladay, the assistant pastor of Plymouth Church, will co-operate with Dr. Abbott in completing the work. It will be ready for delivery at an early date.
The price of the work will be $3.

EASTER LEAFLETS. Two beautiful little leaflets for the Easter season have been issued by D. Lothrop Company. One, "Easter Lilies," price 35 cents, is a collection of Bible texts, prepared by Mrs. E. R. Fairchild, with emblematic illustrations in color and gold.
The other, "Sunshine," price 50 cents, by Katherine Lee Bates, is a charmingly written poem, with a number of illustrations, in which the wild flowers and sunshine play
their part in diving away the bad temper
of a little lass who had hidden away in the grass in a fit of sulks. The poem tells how she listened to the sermon of the Reverend Buttercup, and at the end,

She peeped from between the wind-blown locks

At the clink of the contribution-box;
But when the squirrel came down the aisle,
In his acorn-cup she dropped a smile.

Both leaflets are printed on the finest paper,
with gold-stamped cover.

The March PANSY opens with a capital story for boys, written by Pansy herself, followed by another for girls, "Fretting Lettie,"
by Mary E. Metheny, of Tarsus, Asia
Minor. The leading stories, by Mrs. G. R.
Alden (Pansy) and Margaret Sidney, possess unusual interest, while the sketch of Remarkable Women (Queen Victoria) with portrait and picture of the Queen's home in the Scottish Highlands, the poem for recitation, combining counsel with history, the shorter stories, sketches and verse, make up a number not to be excelled in reading for boys and girls, as well as the entire family. Illustrated.

$1 per year. D. Lothrop & Co., Boston.

Obituaries.

Obituaries to be inserted must be no longer than three hundred words.

DIED.—In Hagerstown, Md., February 1, 1887, J. Melville Winger, aged 34 years, 2 months and 25 days.

Mr. Winger was born at Claylick, Franklin county, Pa. He was the thirteenth child of Mr. Joseph Winger. He grew to manhood years in his native place. After attending the common schools for a number of years he finished his education at Professor Shumaker's Academy in Chambersburg.
He was a diligent scholar and an agreeable companion. After completing his education, he followed photography for about a year in Greencastle. He then engaged in the mercantile business with his brother A.bert, at Claylick, which he followed, for the most part, the rest of his life.

As a business man, he was honest, capable, accommodating and obliging, and won the respect and esteem of everybody in the community, and of all with whom he dealt.
He was married to Miss Catharine Leshner, of Clearspring, Md. They had three children, two of whom are living.

He became a member of Trinity Reformed church on the 1st of April, 1877, and remained a faithful member until a few months before his death, when his membership was transferred to the First Reformed church, Hagerstown, Md., in which city he had taken up his residence.

When he was about eleven years of age he ran a pitchfork into his foot, which poisoned
it and made its amputation necessary to save his life. He suffered great pain from this accident, and from its effects never fully recovered. It seems to have poisoned his whole system and annoyed him not a little.

During the last year of his life, he took little interest in business. His health became more and more precarious, and he realized that the end was not far off. He waited patiently the Master's summons, and now rests in peace in a better country. His aged father, wife, brothers, sisters and friends
enjoy all the consolations and comfort flowing from a life thus devoted and consecrated to the service of the Lord.

H. M. R.

DIED.—February 7th, 1887, at Willow Hill, Franklin county, Pa., Maurice Nelson, son of Mr. Jerome and Sarah Detrick, aged 15 years.

In the sudden and unexpected death of this promising youth, the hearts of Christian parents are weighed down with heavy sorrow.
Nelson was baptized in early childhood, and grew up in the bosom of Christian nurture,
and under the moral and religious training of a Christian family, a kind and dutiful son;
and a bright and cheerful youth, highly loved and esteemed by all his schoolmates
for moral integrity, an honest heart and an upright life. His progress in school learning and religious knowledge was quite commendable.

His sickness was of short duration. On Sunday evening, January 31st, after his return from church, he first complained; and then by Wednesday and Thursday, his disease—inflammatory rheumatism—seemed to have gained such power, that by the following Sunday, his fond parents gave up all hope of his recovery. Ere the sun rose to his morning brightness, on Monday, the 7th of February, his spirit was called home to the bosom of the Great and Good Shepherd, who died for the lambs as well as the sheep
of His fold.

The stroke is a heavy one, that thus causes
fond, Christian parents, to lament the death of a most promising son. But they mourn
in hope, and with Christian resignation, knowing that what the Divine Master does,
is well done, and for our good, spiritual and eternal.

The funeral of the Christian youth was largely attended on Tuesday afternoon. The church at Fannettsburg was crowded to its utmost capacity, when the Reformed pastor spoke words of comfort and consolation to bereaved parents and mourning kindred, on Christ, the Resurrection and the Life.

May all lay to heart the solemn warning
that comes to us from the death of this promising youth—"Watch, and be ye ready, for ye know not the day or the hour when the Son of Man cometh."

J. H.

DIED.—In Shippensburg, Pa., Thursday
evening, March 3rd, 1887, Mrs. Sarah Gribble, aged 76 years, 2 months and 20 days.

This aged mother in Israel had been for many years a consistent member of the Reformed church in this place. Through all her troubles and afflictions she continued to trust her Lord and Master, and though made to bear intense sufferings just previous to her death, yet she called upon the Lord to be merciful, and send relief.

The pastor, assisted by her former much-esteemed pastor, the venerable Father Geo.
W. Glessner, D.D., conducted the funeral service at her late residence on South Penn street, after which her mortal remains were laid away in the cemetery, to await the last trump.

May God in His mercy sanctify and bless this affliction to the spiritual good of those left behind—so that they, too, may strive to attain that "rest which remaineth for the people of God."

J. D. M.

DIED.—At her home near Claysburg, Pa., February 16th, 1887, Mrs. Anna Weyandt,
aged 61 years, 10 months and 16 days.

The deceased became a member of the Reformed church in early years, to which she remained faithful until death. She leaves a husband and many friends to mourn
her loss. May the God of all consolation comfort them in their bereavement.

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them."

Home.

The Rev. Elisha S. Thomas, of St. Paul, Minnesota, has accepted the election to the office of Assistant Bishop in the diocese of Kansas.

The Mennonite Brethren in Christ in Pennsylvania, have decreed that the ministers of their sect be prohibited from riding on railroads on Sundays.

The report for the year 1886, shows that there are 4,277 Congregational churches in the United States and 4,090 Congregational ministers. The total membership is 438,341.

Dr. Thomas Sproul, now over eighty years of age, is filling a professorship made vacant in the Reformed Presbyterian Seminary, Allegheny, Pa., by the death of the late lamented Dr. Sloan.

The General Theological Seminary has recently received from Mr. George A. Jarvis, of Brooklyn, N. Y., the founder of the Bishop Paddock lectureship, a gift of $40,000 toward the erection of a new building on the Ninth avenue front.

Figures printed in the Methodist Year Book show that on January 1, 1887, Methodism throughout the world numbered 35,000 traveling preachers, and 6,323,000 members. In the United States there are 27,000 traveling preachers, and 4,000,000 members and a population of over 15,000,000, or more than one-fourth of the population of the entire country—$5,000,000. The Methodist Episcopal church alone numbers in the United States 12,800 traveling preachers, and 2,000,000 members, having 20,000 churches, worth $77,000,000; 7,200 parsonages, worth $11,000,000; 144 college and other school properties, worth, including endowments, $15,000,000; making a total of 103,000,000.

The "Baptist Handbook" shows a total of 2,742 churches, with 302,615 members in Great Britain, Ireland, and the Channel Islands. The sitting accommodation is estimated at 1,102,274. The Sunday-school scholars at 456,694, the local preachers at 4,041, and pastors in charge at 1,868. The totals in the British empire are 4,638 churches, with 460,123 members. From the "Year Book" for 1887 of the Congregational body, we learn that the number of churches, branch churches, and mission stations in England and Wales is 4,481. In Scotland there are 99 churches, in Ireland, 28, in the islands of the British seas, 12. Amongst the 158 ministerial removals, and the 92 settlements at home, four have left for other denominations, and 15 have gone from other denominations to the Congregationalists. There are 10 institutions in heathen lands belonging to the London Missionary Society, training about 300 native students.

Foreign.

The Common Council of the city of Hamburg has declined to present to the Roman Catholic order of "Gray Nuns" the gift of a plot of land for a hospital. The refusal is grounded upon the charge that the hospital would become the centre of proselytizing influence.

The 15th of March, 1887, was celebrated by the Reformed church of Germany, as the 300th anniversary of the death of Calvinus, one of the authors of the Heidelberg Catechism, at Herborn. Pastor Cuno of Eddigshausen, near Göttingen, will publish a historical paper on the subject.

2400 theological students in the German universities have petitioned the Reichstag not to exempt them from military service. They want to do their patriotic duty just as well as any other men. The Catholics on the other hand demand the exemption for their students fearing to lose their strict hold on their young men, who might become too patriotic.

The largest Reformed church in Germany is at Elberfeld. Its membership is 35,000, but there are 6 pastors, each of whom has his own district and a third church will be built soon. The Sunday-school numbers 700 children with 40 teachers under the direction of 2 pastors. The consistory in its last report complains of the apparent neglect of the Lord's table; for only 8 per cent. of the members communed last year, whilst the Lutheran church at Elberfeld could show 172 per cent.

The Rev. Robert Chambers, of Erzurum, Turkey, says: "I have given up all hopes of a self-supporting church in any of our villages during the reign of the Turk. There is hope in the towns, where merchants always succeed in gaining a little, and where we find larger and more compact populations to work among. It is a fact also that the more enterprising and successful villagers are almost certain to move into towns and become merchants. We are, therefore, trying to make arrangements to push the work in the towns."

In a pastoral letter just issued Cardinal Manning says: "We are in a third Babylon, as great as Rome. It is the capital of a Christian people. Is its people Christian? We are responsible for all that is Catholic, scattered in this wilderness of five millions of men; and we are debtors to labor with even more unselfish love and denial of self than other men, and that in all works of humanity and of sympathy with those who suffer, be they ours in faith or not. They are our brethren; they share the same sufferings and sorrows. We are their debtors in all the seven works of spiritual and of corporal mercy. Upon multitudes among us there is an unconsciousness like sleep. They have never known poverty or want. Their well-provided life, they think, the lot of all, or might be, and therefore ought to be, so that they will not even read or listen. They do not know the condition of our poor, but the fault is their own. Others again there are who know the truth, but are so confident of their theories of social science that they give no prompt salvation to those who are not in conformity with rule. The laws of the moral world are indeed inflexible, because they are divine, but the state of the moral world is always abnormal, and to a large extent immoral. Nevertheless we are debtors to all men. And the hunger and misery have rights even in the worst of men. And we have duties, even to those whom we may never be able to save. But into this large field of Christian obligation it is not necessary to enter now. Only two words shall be added. We have never sounded the deep sea of the misery of London, nor will those surroundings be ever taken, until the efforts of official search be largely helped by the spontaneous personal service both of men and women devoted to

ACTION OF THE HEART.

In restless sleep the heart slows up and its beats number ten less every minute—six hundred less every hour, and in the usual time allotted to sleep, eight hours, four thousand eight hundred less than the number given in the same period of wakefulness. This means rest to that wonderful organ, a rest that restores its powers and enables it to discharge its functions in a more healthful and vigorous manner. The cases of heart disease which have been cured by the use of Compound Oxygen, as administered by Drs. Starkey & Palen, are a very interesting study. They all report insomnia relieved as a beginning and then go on to tell how the palpitation gradually was relieved, and the action of the heart became regular and comfortable. If the action of the heart be kept up to full working capacity by wakefulness the time cannot be far off when it will wear itself out, and the palpitation and flutter which cause so much trouble may therefore, with good reason, be feared. A treatise on Compound Oxygen, giving the mode of action and results of this remarkable curative agent, will be sent free. Address Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa.

One of their patients, Rev. L. H. Morey, Seneca Falls, N. Y., says, in a letter dated October 12, 1885: "I think it must be a year or more since I purchased a Compound Oxygen Home Treatment, and used it up. I am confident it did me a great deal of good in throat and heart troubles; the fluttering and pain frequently experienced in the heart, have not touched me for months. I did not think of Compound Oxygen for that trouble, but used it for throat catarrh. The distressing heart trouble has certainly left me." In a letter dated October 30th, he adds: "With the exception of a cold, contracted since I last wrote you, I am in perfect health. What gratifies me most is my complete deliverance from pain in the region of the heart, and from frequent and distressing fluttering or palpitation of the heart, from which I suffered for years: It used to trouble me so much that I could not sleep on my left side; and frequently I would start up in bed, and have to sit up till the sensation had passed; the sensation was usually accompanied by faintness. Now I sleep on either side, and have not for months, had a return of either the pain or the fluttering. I used the Compound Oxygen for possible help to lungs, throat, and catarrh, especially the latter. I believe the Compound Oxygen to be a nerve and brain restorer; at least, I work professionally with surprise and unwonted freedom from exhaustion."

Fifty persons have been arrested in St. Louis for complicity in the election frauds of last November.

The Gazette (London) says: "Lundborg's Ederia is a perfume which has no equal. Amongst the aristocracy it has taken the place of every other scent, and all ladies of any pretension to social standing invariably use it."

The German electors showed a majority for the supporters of Bismarck.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla was the first successful blood medicine ever offered to the public. This preparation is still held in the highest public estimation both at home and abroad. Its miraculous cures and immense sales show this. Ask your druggist for it.

A new pocket camera has been invented. It is inclosed in an ordinary silver watch case and is said to do very good work by the dry-plate process.

are very uncertain property; for every paying mine a hundred exist that do not pay. But if you write to Hallett & Co., Portland, Maine, you will receive, free, full particulars about their new business, and learn how some have made over $50 in a single day at it. You can live at home, and earn from $5 to $25 and upwards per day wherever you are located. Both sexes; all ages. Capital not required; you are started free. Send your address, and all will be proved to you.

Expect not praise without envy, until you are dead.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE

In Digestive Disorders.

Dr. E. V. Wright, Saratoga Springs, N. Y., says: "I have used it for years, and my experience has proved beyond question, that the peculiar combination of phosphates renders it most valuable in the treatment of digestive disorders."

It is well if we make method our slave; but it is bad if we are slaves to method.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhoea. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

"NEARLY CRAZED with pain" is the cry of many a victim of rheumatism or neuralgia, and frequently other diseases, such as kidney and liver complaints, are directly traceable to rheumatism or neuralgia. These diseases, for some unexplainable reason, are rapidly increasing, and in many instances are the direct cause of much sickness which hides its real origin as to be mistaken for other diseases. In curing rheumatism, neuralgia, sick headache, and in many cases kidney and liver troubles, Athlophoros has wrought wonders. Those who have used it are best qualified to speak of its merit.

Rouses Point, New York.
I took Athlophoros and I think it helped me. I had not walked for 8 weeks when I took the Athlophoros and have walked since. I have taken nearly all medicines recommended for rheumatism, and I think that Athlophoros helped me the most of any. I am not entirely cured yet, but am going to take Athlophoros if it comes on bad again.

Mrs. TROTT, HAYES, Boltenville, Va., August 18th, 1886.
I can testify I believe I owe my life to Athlophoros as an instrument in the hand of God. I have had no return of those awful spells of neuralgia of the heart since I last wrote you. Hoping this may induce others to try so valuable a medicine, I remain Very respectfully yours,
MRS. C. N. PAIGE.

Pawling, N. Y., August 19, 1886.
The bottle of Athlophoros I procured for Jacob Reimer's rheumatism. She had been confined to her bed for three weeks or more. Could hardly help herself any. In one week she was on her feet. She had not long before given birth to a child and had inflammatory rheumatism.

A. A. TOFFY.
Every druggist should keep Athlophoros and Athlophoros Pills, but where they cannot be bought of the druggist the Athlophoros Co., 112 Wall St., New York, will send either (carriage paid) on receipt of regular price, which is $1.00 per bottle for Athlophoros and 50c. for Pills.

For liver and kidney diseases, dyspepsia, indigestion, weakness, nervous debility, of women, constipation, headache, impure blood, etc., Athlophoros Pills are unequalled.
